President Proclaims 59-Cent Dollar; to Deal In World Gold at $35

Effect on Foreign Powers Studied

By Elliott Thurston.

By another epochal proclamation, signed at 3:10 p. m. yesterday, President Roosevelt cut the gold dollar down to 59.06 cents, automatically created his $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund and put the Nation on what Treasury officials called an international gold bullion standard.

He announced that the Treasury, through the Federal Reserve Bank of New York as its fiscal agent, will buy all gold, foreign and domestic, offered to American mints and assay offices at $35 a fine Troy ounce, less mint charges and one-fourth per cent for handling charges, and that it will sell gold to central banks at $35 an ounce, plus one-fourth per cent handling charge.

By these momentous steps, the President expects to force world gold prices to his figure of $35 an ounce and to produce a rise in commodity prices.

Change Unprecedented.

Only twice before in American history has the gold content of the dollar been changed—once in 1834, the last time in 1873, but never so drastically, nor with the idea of driving the rest of the world to conformity.

But beyond these matters for writers of history, the President's action was all-important at this juncture because it dispels much of the fog which has hung over monetary policy. It accomplishes the long-expected revaluation of the dollar and fixes it with a certain finality, although not necessarily permanently, at 59.06 per cent of its former gold weight. It rules out now, if not for all time, the commodity dollar of Prof. George F. Warren.

It establishes the gold bullion standard, as the Treasury sees it and as Mr. Roosevelt has promised, with gold circulating among central banks if and when foreign banks are willing to abide by our set price.

Stock Prices Go Up.

The man in the street will notice no difference in his dollar at the moment, but he may note that stocks soared on the Pacific Coast when the news reached there before the markets closed, that the dollar fell on exchanges, that generally

Tydings Urged For Governor

Maryland Democrats Are Booming Senator to Avert Party Tangle.

Baltimore, Jan. 31 (AP).—The Baltimore Sun today said ranking Democrats of Maryland are bringing considerable pressure on United States Senator Millard E. Tydings to seek the party nomination for Governor, "on the grounds his entry would sidetrack a tangled primary fight."

The Sun said the question has been the subject of numerous conferences between these leaders and the Senator recently, but, despite their efforts, the only assurance they have received, it is understood, is that he would become a candidate only as a final resort to stave off party disaster.

Tydings was said to consider it his duty to remain in Washington, as he is the ranking Democratic officer of the State, the senior Senator from Maryland, and is understood to feel that only 19 Republicans and 16 Democrats are his equal or senior in point of service.

Among some of the highest party officials of the State, according to the paper, are those who assert Gov. Albert C. Ritchie "can not be allowed" to become a candidate to succeed himself for a fifth term.

Warships to Leave Norfolk for South

Two Sail in Day to Join Pacific Fleet.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.).—Two modernized battleships, the Mississippi and New Mexico, will sail tomorrow or Friday from the Southern drill grounds, off the Virginia Capes, for Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. They are to have ship and gun drills en route and target practice after they arrive in Cuban waters.

They are to proceed from Cuba to Puerto Rico, where they will spend three days during which the crews will be given shore leave. Early in April they will start for Panama, where they will join the United States fleet now in the Pacific.

Mail Probers Denied Air Transport Files

(Associated Press.)

Senate air mail investigators yesterday turned their attention to another former Government official, W. P. McCracken, one-time Assistant Secretary of Commerce in charge of aviation, and were balked at least temporarily when he refused to submit his private files relating to his representation of companies seeking air mail contracts.

McCracken, now a Washington attorney, testified to his solicitation of mail contracts for numerous well-known aviation concerns both before and after leaving office, but insisted that correspondence between a lawyer and his client was "privileged."

The former official, who held his Government position from 1926 to 1929, said that as an attorney he had represented Pan-American Airways, National Aviation, Western

400 Million Sales Levy Plan Beaten

G.O.P. Amendment Vetoed by House Ways Committee.

The House Ways and Means Committee yesterday flatly rejected the Crowther $400,000,000 sales tax amendment, offered as a substitute for existing nuisance levies.

The amendment was referred to a subcommittee. At the same time the committee turned thumbs down on the plan of Representative James A. Frear (Republican), Wisconsin, to switch the spotlight of publicity on income tax returns.

Proponents of both measures announced they will ask a showdown on the floor of the House.

After a hectic session, Chairman Robert L. Doughton announced a report to the House on the revised bill will be delayed until early next week.

13 to 12 Vote.

By a vote of 13 to 12 the committee decided to leave unchanged the present law, under which husbands and wives in eight "community property" States can file separate returns.

Other changes in the bill would require the taxing of lubricating oils and gasoline at the refineries instead of retail tanks. Treasury experts estimated this would save $20,000,000 lost every year.

A Treasury Department proposal to coordinate supervision of legal divisions of the Treasury under the office of general counsel was approved.

Meanwhile, a House Judiciary subcommittee yesterday decided to hold hearings on 11 proposed amendments to the Constitution to permit taxation of some $42,000,000,000 in securities now tax exempt.

Tredway Sponsors Bill.

One such bill is sponsored by Representative Allen T. Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts.

Today the committee will attempt to get final agreement on a number of other features of the bill, with a move under way to reconsider action on the 5 cents a pound tax on cocoanut and sesame oil.

The sales tax proposal made to the committee yesterday would provide a 2½ per cent tax on manufacturers' sales, with food, clothing and medicine exempted.

Punishment Meted Lion Is Under Fire

Cleveland, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—The punishment meted Sammy, big cantankerous lion with Clyde Beatty's act at Al Sirat Grotto Circus here, today drew a storm of protest climaxed by threat of the Animal Protective League to bar the act from Cleveland.

Sammy, who had killed a female lion and had acted up in general for two days, was put in a cage with four older and tougher lions who promptly administered a beating which took all the starch out of Sammy's sails and made a much better and wiser lion.

2 Die as Australians And Foreigners Fight

Kalgoorlie, Western Australia, Jan. 31 (AP).—Rioting between Australians and large groups of foreigners employed in the gold fields near here continued today and two men were killed and six injured.

Police got control of the situation in a few hours. The trouble followed the slaying of an Australian in a bar room and the arrest of a foreign bartender on a charge of manslaughter. Mobs yesterday burned three hotels and fifteen houses.

Bodies of 3 Stratosphere Fliers Found

Investigation Started in Russian Tragedy After Record.

Moscow, Jan. 31 (AP).—The bodies of three Soviet balloonists were found today in the battered gondola in which they went higher into the stratosphere than man had gone before.

They were killed yesterday afternoon in trying to land the balloon, the Osoaviakhim, 155 miles from here, after reporting an ascent to 67,585 feet.

The crew included Pavil Fedoseinko, Andre Vasenko and Ilya Usyskin.

So great was the force of the concussion that all scientific instruments aboard were smashed. The bag broke loose from the gondola and disappeared.

The tragedy was announced officially today to the Soviet All-Union Congress. When the three men took off in a secret ascent yesterday they said the flight was a "gift" to the congress. A widespread search for the balloonists had been conducted.

An investigation immediately started, as aviation and civil authorities and the populace received news of the catastrophe with great sorrow.

Eyewitnesses who saw the balloon descend near the village of Potiskyostrog said there were two explosions when it hit the ground.

Pending results of the investigation, aviators believed the crew released too much gas in descending and had too little ballast to prevent too rapid a drop.

The last message from the crew said they were trying to find a landing place in the fog after groping for hours through the clouds. Just a few minutes earlier they had reported that "all is well."

Emma Goldman Visits Home She Fled Back in '91

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 31 (AP). Tempered by more than 40 years of battling against the social order, Emma Goldman, when she arrives here tomorrow, will find a different "home" from that which she left in 1891, a fiery, young anarchist.

Sixty-four now, she was 21 when, after a quarrel with her husband, she set off for New York, vowed to devote her life to anarchy. The Goldmans had settled here a few years previously after fleeing religious persecution in Rusisa.

Fourteen years ago the United States deported her to Russia. She returns on a 90-day Presidential permit.

She will find the home she last visited in 1919, but not her mother. She died in 1923 at the age of 86, unable to understand her daughter's hatred for "capitalism."

Missouri to Use News Photos in Lynch Trial

St. Joseph, Mo., Jan. 31 (AP).—W. O. Sawyers, assistant attorney general of Missouri, intimated today that newspaper pictures will play a prominent part in the trial of Walter Garton, charged with murder in the lynching of Lloyd Warner, Negro, November 28.

Sawyers disclosed that St. Joseph and Kansas City photographers had been subpenaed.

10 Killed as Nomads Ambush British Force

Peshawar, India, Jan. 31 (AP).—Three native scouts were killed and five wounded in an engagement between government troops and nomadic tribesmen in an ambush near Spinway, in north Waziristan, it was learned today.

The scouts, led by two English captains, killed seven tribesmen and wounded another.

5 Per Cent Pay Return Due at Once

Subcommittee of Senate Also Votes 5 Per Cent More July 1.

Passage of Plan Is Held Certain; War Veterans Denied Increase.

Restoration of 5 per cent of Government salaries, effective today, was voted by the Senate Appropriations subcommittee in charge of the independent offices appropriations bill yesterday.

Return of another 5 per cent July 1 also was voted by the subcommittee.

Under this program the maximum cut which Government employes would be subjected to in the next fiscal year would be 5 per cent. The program, however, authorized the President to restore the last 5 per cent after July 1 if living costs justify it.

Removal of the economy law restrictions on pay of personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey and the Public Health Service, also was voted. Elimination of this so-called "freezing" provision was recommended by President Roosevelt in his budget message.

Veterans Lose Out.

The subcommittee, however, by a margin of one vote refused to increase the provisions for war veterans. Representatives of veterans organizations and several members of the Senate have advocated adoption of the American Legion four-point program, which has been incorporated in a measure introduced by Senator David A. Reed (Republican), of Pennsylvania.

Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, who has taken charge of the Administration's effort against upsetting the economy law, sponsored both the pay restoration compromise and led the opposition to the demands of the veterans.

Action of the subcommittee still must be approved by the full committee, by the Senate and by the House and signed by the President before the proposal becomes law.

Administration leaders said they felt sure approval would be given. Advocates of restoration of full pay, however, intend to carry their fight to the full committee and to the Senate. Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, said he would seek full restoration July 1 and would ask to have the 5 per cent to be restored immediately made retroactive to January 1.

Hatfield Dissatisfied.

Senator Henry D. Hatfield (Republican), of West Virginia, described the subcommittee action as unsatisfactory.

"I am confident that when it comes down to a record vote a majority will vote for full return of salaries," he said.

Senator James J. Davis (Republican), of Pennsylvania, also announced his purpose to seek full restoration.

Others talked along the same lines. But there is a feeling among a rather good-sized group that the restorationists should take what they have got and count it a victory.

Pressure of the President has been brought against full restoration. Coupled with this has been a warning that the pay restorationists had better be glad with partial victory than to run the risk of getting less.

Advocates of increased allowances for veterans, however, served

Japan Sees War Threat In Ship Race

Empire's Ship Strength Held Soon to Exceed American.

Tokyo, Jan. 31 (AP).—The Japanese Diet was advised today that new Japanese auxiliary vessels will outrank those of the United States by 1937, and that if navy men of the two nations dictate programs in a coming navy conference "a rupture would be inevitable."

Kenkichi Yoshizawa, former foreign minister, told fellow members of the House of Peers that "intensified naval competition, even if war is averted," will result from the domination of the 1935 navy parley by navy men, "if the pessimists' view is accepted."

"In view of these dangers," he declared, "perhaps it would be better to abandon the conference altogether unless preliminary negotiations should show the possibilities of an agreement."

Future Superiority Shown.

Admiral Mineo Osumi, minister of the navy, presented statistics to the House of Representatives showing, he said, that at the end of 1936 Japan will have 140 under-age cruisers, destroyers and submarines, compared to 100 such craft in the American Navy.

He added that if present plans are fulfilled, the Japanese auxiliary fleet will be under the treaty age and within 2,791 tons of the present treaty limits in three years.

Admiral Osumi's figures, given in response to insistent questions, were confined to a comparison of the American and Japanese navies at the end of 1936, when the present naval treaties expire unless renewed in a parley scheduled for next year.

Based on Present Programs.

They assumed completion of the current Japanese program, for which appropriations are now being considered in Parliament, and the approved United States program, exclusive of the Vinson bill, which was passed by the American House of Representatives yesterday and which provided for replacements costing $475,000,000 to $570,000,000.

(The Vinson measure provides for the building of 65 destroyers, 30 submarines, and one airplane carrier in a 5-year period).

Admiral Osumi previously declared Japan would demand increased ratios at the next naval conference. Today he declined to say whether his government would denounce the Washington naval treaty before the end of this year, in accordance with provisions of the pact.

Figures Show Ratios.

His figures showed that at the end of 1936, Japan's total navy, including overage tonnage, would be 68 per cent as strong as the American and that, excluding overage tonnage it would be 81 per cent as large.

Japan's cruisers, destroyers, and submarines would be 78 per cent of the American if overage craft were counted and 103 per cent if only underage vessels were included.

Japan's total underage auxiliary tonnage would be 364,000, compared to 363,000 in the United States fleet.

Deadline Is Past, But Insull Stays

Greece Postpones Action Until Tomorrow.

Athens, Feb. 1 (Thursday) (AP).—A drama which had been scheduled to reach its climax last midnight with the deportation of Samuel Insull failed to materialize, with nothing definite put in its place.

A cabinet meeting at which an announcement was to have been issued concerning the former Chicagoan's status was devoted entirely to a discussion of a Balkan pact. Consideration of the Insull case was postponed until tomorrow morning.

The minister of the interior said a definite decision had not been made because several questions were still pending, principally those involving his traveling papers and his health.

Court Removes Cannon Pupils After Hearing Cruelty Charges

Hague, Va., Jan. 31 (AP). — Juvenile Judge Watt T. Mayo said tonight that after investigation of charges that ten boys attending a school operated at Meta, Va., by Richard Mason Cannon, son of Bishop James Cannon, jr., had been subjected to mistreatment, he had decided the boys' welfare required they be removed from Cannon's custody.

He said they had been turned over to Merle Trader, Westmoreland County sheriff and probation officer, and Mrs. Trader, until he could communicate with the boys' parents.

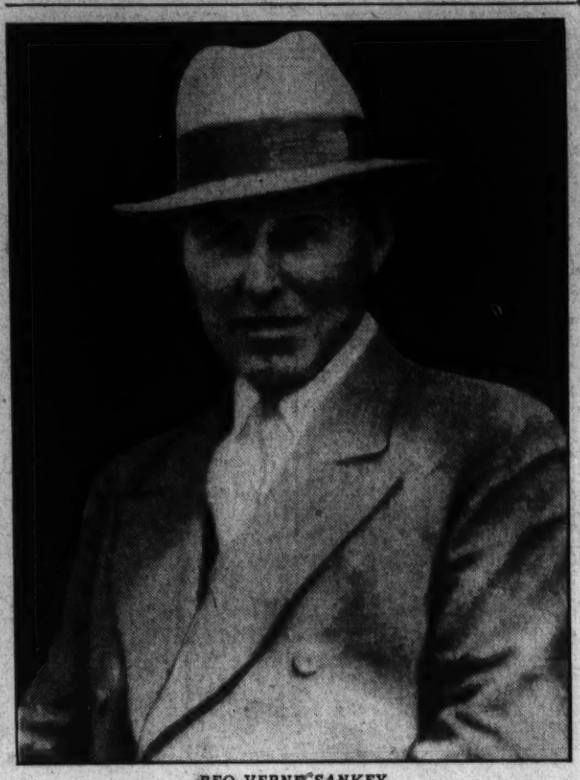
No charges were lodged against Cannon, Judge Mayo said, but the evidence showed the boys were not receiving the required attention, and that they were subjected to unduly harsh disciplinary measures.

Judge Mayo was unable to furnish the names of the boys involved.

Cannon brought the boys here recently from California, where he had previously conducted a military school. The mistreatment charges arose this week when two of the boys ran away from school, and after being returned complained they were "beaten unmercifully."

Others charged they were subjected to mistreatment on the trip across the continent from California.

Verne Sankey Trapped; Admits 2 Kidnapings; Grilled in Lindy Case



REO VERNE SANKEY.

Boettcher, Bohn Thefts Confessed to Chicago City Detective.

Ruth and Dempsey On "Prospect" List

Woman Is Also Held; Traced Mail From Barber Shop.

Reo Verne Sankey, one of the country's most dangerous kidnapers, long a suspect in the Lindbergh case, was arrested in Chicago yesterday by Department of Justice agents.

Immediately after his arrest, he confessed two major kidnapings, those of Charles Boettcher, wealthy Denver broker, and Haskell Bohn, son of a St. Paul manufacturer.

Officials at once began questioning him in connection with the Lindbergh kidnaping.

Announcement of the arrest was made at the Department of Justice here before it was made known in Chicago.

Woman Is Also Held.

Sankey was arrested in the apartment of a woman who gave her name as Helen Mattern. She also was held. In the apartment was found a tin box containing $3,450. Officers also found a sawed-off shotgun and two revolvers, all loaded.

It was learned in Chicago, according to the United Press, that Department of Justice agents discovered Sankey was receiving his mail in a barber shop. Six officers waited in the barber shop four days until he appeared, and then followed him to the apartment.

Sankey made no attempt to resist arrest, but in his pocket were a number of poison pills. It is believed he planned suicide in case of capture, but at the Department of Justice it was said "our men didn't give him a chance to try it."

It was said Sankey had lived in the apartment for several weeks. He was known as "W. E. Clark."

Following the arrest, Capt. John J. Lamb, of the New Jersey State Police, told the Associated Press Sankey had been wanted for some time for questioning in the Lindbergh kidnaping.

Check on Whereabouts.

"Sankey is a suspect," Lamb said, "just as anyone in the kidnaping racket is a suspect. We want to question them all to ascertain where they were at the time of the kidnaping."

He said Sankey had been sought and officials in Western cities had been asked to watch for him.

Lamb said the New Jersey police had not been officially notified

Britain, Italy Concede Reich Right to Arm

London and Rome Seek New 4-Power Pact to Insure Peace.

(Associated Press.)

Great Britain and Italy in separate memorandums today proposed to allow Germany to rearm to break the long deadlock over armaments.

London's newest proposal is a 10-year plan, recognizing Germany's claim to equality to arms and adding additional security proposals.

Italy suggested that powers other than Germany hold their armaments to the present basis, and proposed another four-power conference to work out details.

London, Jan. 31 (AP).—The British government tonight made public its latest disarmament plan, calling on other nations to agree—with the alternative "an armaments' race, the end of which no man can see."

The provisions of the armaments plan were publishred in a "white paper," which said the proposal was submitted during the last few days to the powers concerned.

The note said Great Britain recognized Germany's claim to equality in arms and emphasized "that the return of Germany to Geneva and to the League of Nations should be an essential condition."

Must Reach Agreement.

The choice facing Europe, the memorandum declared, is as follows:

Reach an agreement in a treaty abandoning certain classes of weapons by the most heavily armed powers; or,

Reach an agreement on a basis that the most heavily armed powers will at any rate undertake not to increase their present armaments.

The British government urged other governments to follow the first course and suggested that the British draft of a convention, as presented last year at Geneva should be adopted with the addition of three other articles.

The note pointed specifically to the recent declaration of Adolf Hitler, chancellor of Germany, "that Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 31 (AP).—Busby Berkeley, film dance director, who makes a specialty of selecting beauties to adorn his musical films, has selected one to lead to the altar—but she isn't from his chorus group.

Traylor "Much Better;" Temperature Recedes

Chicago, Jan. 31 (AP).—Melvin A. Traylor's condition was generally improved today, his temperature down to 99.8 degrees and all "phases of his illness much better," his doctors reported.

Reich Steps Up Payments On Bond Debt

Interest Transfers Are Increased; Holders in U. S. Gain.

Berlin, Jan. 31 (AP).—The question of German interest transfers was settled, at least for six months, today in an agreement between the Reichsbank and representatives of foreign countries, providing for an increase in the amounts Germany permits to be sent abroad.

Foreign holders of German securities will receive 76.9 per cent of the due payments, instead of the 65 per cent involved in a moratorium order issued last fall.

The additional amount was made possible through the Reichsbank's allowance of a 67 per cent payment in scrip, instead of the 50 per cent previously permitted.

Equal Treatment Is Aim.

The agreement affects only creditors not included in a Swiss and Dutch agreement, whereby nationals of those countries get 100 per cent of their monies in exchange for commercial concessions.

The agreement with Switzerland and the Netherlands will expire June 1, after which an attempt will be made to place the entire transfer problem on a contract basis, as against the present hit-or-miss system whereby, the foreign agents here have contended, the creditor nation exerting the greatest pressure gets the best treatment.

Another meeting was scheduled for April.

The substance of today's agreement, which marked a foreign office victory over Reichsbank officials and which came after nearly a week of negotiations, promised equal treatment for all creditors beginning June 1.

Half Held in U. S.

More than $748,000,000 in German bonds involved in the moratorium are held in the United States. This is, roughly, 50 per cent of the entire amount. Dutch and Swiss investors hold about 30 per cent, and British about 10 per cent.

The agreement secures an additional $5,000,000 in interest payments to American investors annually. The 30 per cent cash provision in the moratorium order remains unchanged, with the remainder accounted for by a 50 per cent discount in the scrip.

Police loaded it into a police ambulance and took it to headquarters.

22 Witnesses Pick Dillinger

Machine Gunner Is Named Slayer; Trial to Open on February 13.

Crown Point, Ind., Jan. 31 (AP).—John Dillinger was identified today by 22 witnesses as the machine gunner who killed Policeman Patrick O'Malley January 15 in the $20,000 robbery of the First National Bank at East Chicago.

After the show up, Prosecutor Robert G. Estill announced the outlaw would be arraigned tomorrow and placed on trial for his life February 13.

The witnesses, bank officers and employes, all were positive of their identification of Dillinger. Among them were Walter L. Spencer and Edward L. Steck, vice presidents, and James A. Dalton, cashier of the First National.

Dillinger will be arraigned Friday before Judge William J. Murray.

Louis Piquett, who represented Leo Brothers in his trial at Chicago for the murder of Alfred (Jake) Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter, has been retained by the desperado as his counsel.

Ice Buffeting Byrd Flagship As Floes Split

Bay of Whales, Antarctica, Jan. 31 (AP) (Via Mackay Radio).—Crumbling masses of ice that wrecked plans to unload winter stores endangered the helpless flagship ot the second Byrd Antarctic expedition late today as she vainly sought a safe berth.

On all sides the craft was menaced by huge floes that choked edges of the Bay of Whales and twice drove her away from a mooring place.

Bear of Oakland Arrives.

Some measure of cheer was given by the arrival of the Bear of Oakland, supply ship, from Dunedin, N. Z. from where she set out with essential supplies two weeks ago.

Desperate efforts were put forth aboard the flagship after she came alongside the ice yesterday, following a 61-hour battle with ice. The weary crew worked frantically to finish the job of discharging the best of the stores, but the craft could keep its anchorage only five hours.

Dog teams and tractors, meanwhile, were hurried from Pressure Camp two miles away to pick up the discharged cargo and move it beyond the widening cracks in the ice.

From the bridge, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd and Commodore Gjertsen had watched the unloading, the crumbling of the bay ice, and the encircling movement of the masses of loose ice.

Cracks Widen Rapidly.

When the flagship first came alongside the ice, cracks were scarcely visible; this morning they were six inches wide.

Tractors were considered too precious to be risked in the operations across the cracks.

The decision to move early today was delayed as long as possible, while floating masses were about to close in on the ship.

Duty to Withhold Letters.

After McCracken had asserted he felt a "solemn duty" not to divulge the correspondence which committee investigators had sought in his office earlier, he agreed to inform his various clients by telegraph that the committee desired them to waive their legal rights.

The committee spent most of yesterday afternoon in executive session questioning B. T. Batsch, trust officer of the Toledo Trust Co., about a trust account established by Walter F. Brown, former Postmaster General, in November, 1929.

Committee members said Batsch testified that Brown had explained receipt of the securities from the late Joseph P. Bagley by saying that the latter had become financially embarrassed and he had helped him out.

Among the securities received from the Bagley account, committee members said Batsch told them, were 1,600 shares of International Mercantile Marine preferred. At the present time, they said Batsch testified, the trust holds 4,300 shares of I. M. M. common.

Among stocks, committee members said, were 150 Pennroad and 225 Pennsylvania Railroad and others of a diversified nature.

Committee members said Batsch testified he had been purchasing municipal bonds for Brown since 1899, adding that the Pennsylvania and Pennroad holdings had grown from an investment made before Brown became Postmaster General.

Joseph P. Ripley, vice president of the National City Bank, of New York, has been subpenaed by the committee for appearance today.

Paris Ignores Saar Demands of Hitler

Paris, Jan. 31 (AP).—Chancellor Hitler's renewed demand that the question of whether the Saar basin shall be French or German be settled without a plebiscite, fell on deaf ears here today.

Premier Daladier was maintaining silence until his new cabinet could discuss the question, but successive governments and parliament have repeatedly affirmed that the Saar residents alone can decide their destiny, as established by the Treaty of Versailles.

What a Man

He Calls Self 'Great Lover' and Writes Notables.

Los Angeles, Jan. 31 (AP).—The world's greatest lover, as he describes himself, was found by deputy sheriffs in the person of Joseps Buday, 36, Hungarian-born restaurant waiter.

In a letter to a Vovina (Calif.) woman, Buday described himself as the "greatest and grandest, dearest, sweetest, prettiest, good-looking best-hearted young man for your own perfect caretaker, or your own perfect lover, or your own perfect husband."

Buday protested he was only trying to improve his position. He was released.

Principals Concerned in Latest Kidnaping Drama

of Sankey's arrest, and indicated no one would be sent to Chicago until Federal authorities and Chicago city detectives indicated a trip would be warranted.

Sankey's name was brought into the Lindbergh case when County Attorney M. F. Kinkead, of St. Paul, said he had information that Sankey "might have been connected with the Lindbergh baby kidnaping."

Kinkead said evidence had been unearthed on Sankey's ranch at Kimball, S. Dak., which led him to believe "Sankey is not out of the Lindbergh picture."

The Sankey ranch was the hiding place of Boettcher, who was held captive in a small house on the farm for 16 days until $60,000 ransom was paid for his release. The Department of Justice announcement said $9,360 of the ransom money had been found at the ranch.

Although there was no announcement concerning detailed revelations in the Bohn kidnaping, it is believed he also was held in the ranch house. Bohn was detained seven days and $12,000 ransom paid for his release.

Dempsey and Ruth Slated.

Kinkead, at the same time he connected Sankey with the Lindbergh kidnaping, said he had evidence Sankey had planned to kidnap Jack Dempsey and Babe Ruth.

Kinkead did not disclose the nature of the evidence, but Associated Press learned from Federal operatives in Chicago that a handwriting expert had said there was a marked similarity between the writing of ransom notes in the Boettcher and Lindbergh cases.

Boetcher was a friend of Lindbergh. He was kidnaped on the night of February 12, 1933, as he and his wife drove into the driveway of their Denver home. Two armed men jumped on the running board of the car. They forced Boettcher into another car and handed Mrs. Boettcher a note.

The note demanded $60,000 ransom and recalled that the Lindbergh baby had been killed "because the ransom was not paid."

It instructed members of the Boettcher family to insert an advertisement in newspapers if they intend to pay the ransom.

Boettcher's father immediately indicated he was willing to pay, but negotiations with the kidnapers were drawn out for two weeks. Records were kept of the bills, enabling detectives to identify them when they were discovered at the Sankey farm.

Lindbergh Case Again Cited.

The kidnaping of Bohn was similar to that of Boettcher. He was seized on June 30, 1932, as he was entering his garage preparing to go to work at his father's refrigerator plant. Two armed men seized him and forced him into an automobile.

Shortly afterward his family received a note demanding $35,000 ransom. This note referred to the Lindbergh case with the warning that the baby had been killed because ransom had not been paid.

Later it was revealed that $12,000 ransom money had been thrown from an automobile on a country road, and Bohn was imediately released.

Following the Bohn kidnaping, six persons, including Sankey and his wife, were indicted. Mrs. Sankey was arrested, but later released. Sankey has been a fugitive since. Two of the persons indicted were convicted. They were Arthur Henry Youngblood, who is serving a sentence of 26 years, and Carl W Pearce, who was sentenced to 16 years. Following his arrest, Youngblood attempted to commit suicide by slashing his wrists.

Once Railroad Engineer.

Sankey was indicted in connection with the Bohn kidnaping following arrest and confession of Ray Robinson, who implicated Sankey. Robinson was sentenced to 25 years in prison. Both Robinson and Sankey are Canadians. Sankey, who is 42, is a former railroad engineer. Files indicate his only criminal record was a conviction in Minnesota in 1925 of violating the prohibition law.

While Sankey, shortly after he was taken into custody, confessed the Boettcher and Bohn kidnapings, he denied any connection with the kidnaping of William Hamm, jr., St. Paul brewer, or of Edward Bremer, St. Paul banker, who is still missing. It was said, however, that there are indications he might be connected with one or both of these kidnapings.

Notes Scanned For Lindbergh KidnapingClew

Justice Agents Study All Criminals' Writing, Seeking Slayer.

The Department of Justice, still seeking to solve the Lindbergh kidnaping, considers the handwriting on the notes left by the abductor one of the most important clews, it was learned yesterday.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation, testifying before a House appropriations subcommittee, said:

"During November we made 300 examinations of hand-writing in making comparisons with the original Lindbergh note.

"We are constantly on the alert for the persons who perpetrated the Lindbergh kidnaping and murder, and their handwriting is one of the best clews that can be followed in investigation of that case."

Hoover asserted that since enactment of the Federal kidnaping law up to January 1, the Department had been called in five kidnaping cases.

"Every one of these 15 cases was solved, so far as the identity of the kidnapers was concerned, within 30 days," Hoover said.

Hoover said that 10 minutes after the Urchel kidnaping at Oklahoma City, a member of the family telephoned him in Washington, enabling the department to assign agents immediately.

He declined to enlarge upon his statement with respect to the Lindbergh case.

It was learned, however, that specimens of handwriting from most known criminals are being received daily and compared with the original Lindbergh ransom notes in the hope that one of them eventually will shed light on the participants.

British Pianists Found Skillful In Dual Recital

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson, as unanimous a pair of duo-pianists as can be found anywhere today, an Alexander Gray, barytone, were the artists heard yesterday at Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's seventy-fourth musical morning in the Mayflower Hotel. The admirable playing of the musical menage from overseas dominated the program.

These British exponents of ensemble pianism possess the two absolutely essential requirements: the ability to agree upon the finest details of technique and interpretation, and the skill in synchrony that comes from constant association. Without such perfect concord in the players, the sound of two pianos in alleged unison is a painful experience for the ear. To say that the Robertsons provided unalloyed enjoyment is to accord them the highest praise possible.

Their severest test came in their first group of compositions by Bach, an allegro and arrangements of two choral preludes. The clarity of their thematic expositions, the precision of the interweaving parts, and the agreeable quality of tone set uneasiness at rest. After that disclosure of their surety, it was only a matter of settling back with assurance of pleasure to come.

Amusing Polka Played.

At their second appearance they were kind enough to play a polka dedicated to them by the composer, Lennox Berkeley. Unless one has individuality of style, it is inadvisable to write with modernistic irony, for that vein has been quite thoroughly worked. Mr. Berkeley's piece might have been attributed on the program to Alfredo Casella, and no one would have been the wiser. It was transiently amusing, but held no significance.

Compensation lay in their next selection, Debussy's arrangement of Schumann's "Study in Canon Form," excellently presented, and in the fine transcription by Anne Hull and Mary Howe of De Falla's "Ritual Fire Dance," played with rhythmic urgency. Their concluding group contained the scherzo from Mendelssohn's incidental music for "A Midsumemr Night's Dream," the familiar Romance from Arenski's suite, and the brilliant tour de force of the "Blue Danube" waltz as transmorgified by Schulz-Evler and Abram Chasins.

Gray Not at Best.

Either Alexander Gray's vocal cords were temporarily hampered by indisposition or they are showing signs of wear. The promising resonance in his opening song, Beethoven's "God in Nature," was fulfilled later only during those moments when he sang forcibly on full breath. His mezza-voce was lusterless, and his pianissimo tended toward falsetto.

He was at his best in such informal songs as the colloquial "Zummerzetzhire" and Jacques Wolfe's arrangement of "Bone, come a-Knittin'," in which a semiparlando style was used effectively. In lieder of Schubert, Schumann, Hugo Wolf and Erich Wolff he was not so fortunate, despite his sincerity in interpretation. His readings showed understanding, save in the case of Schumann's "Ich grolle nicht," which he sang too slowly and without conveying its mood of contemptuous anger.

Policeman Guilty Of Bad Conduct

Punished as Owner of Car Used in Robbery.

A "severe reprimand" was ordered for Policeman Ralph W. Creel, of the Second Precinct, when he was found guilty by a police trial board yesterday on charges of conduct prejudicial to the reputation, good order and discipline of the force.

It was alleged Creel used his name in the purchase of an automobile for Forrest Harler. In turn, Harler is reputed to have used the machine during a robbery for which he later was sentenced to jail. The car's license numbers were reported to police, and were found listed in Creel's name. He explained that the machine was bought for Harler as a friendly gesture and he was unaware of its use in crime.

Policeman George M. Struder, of the Fourth Precinct, was found guilty of intoxication while off duty. He was fined $50.

Text of Devaluation Order

President Declares Foreign Currency Depreciation Has Adversely Affected U. S. Trade and Requires Credit Expansion; Silver Content Unchanged.

Whereas, by virtue of section 1 of the Act of Congress approved March 14, 1900 (31 Stat. L. 45), the present weight of the gold dollar is fixed at 25.8 grains of gold nine-tenths fine; and

Whereas, by section 43, title 3 of the act approved May 12, 1933 (public No. 10, seventy-third Congress), as amended by Section 12 of the Gold Reserve Act of 1934, it is provided in part as follows:

"Whenever the President finds, upon investigation, that (1) the foreign commerce of the United States is adversely affected by reason of the depreciation in the value of the currency of any other government or governments in relation to the present standard value of gold, or (2) action under this section is necessary in order to regulate and maintain the parity of currency issues of the United States, or (3) an economic emergency requires an expansion of credit, or (4) an expansion of credit is necessary to secure by international agreement a stabilization at proper levels of the currency of various governments, the President is authorized, in his discretion—

Shall Buy Treasury Bills.

"(a) To direct the Secretary of the Treasury to enter into agreements with the several Federal Reserve banks and with the Federal Reserve Board whereby the Federal Reserve Board will, and it is hereby authorized to, notwithstanding any provisions of law or rules and regulations to the contrary, permit such Reserve banks to agree that they will (1) conduct, pursuant to existing law, throughout specified periods, open market operations in obligations of the United States Government or corporations in which the United States is the majority stockholder, and (2) purchase directly and hold in portfolio for an agreed period or periods of time Treasury bills or other obligations of the United States Government in an aggregate sum of $3,000,000,000 in addition to those they may then hold; unless prior to the termination of such period or periods the Secretary shall consent to their sale. No suspension of reserve requirements of the Federal Reserve banks, under the terms of section 11 (c) of the Federal Reserve act, necessitated by reason of operations under this section, shall require the imposition of the graduated tax upon any deficiency in reserves as provided in said section 11 (c). Nor shall it require any automatic increase in the rates of interest or discount charged by any Federal Reserve bank, as otherwise specified in that section. The Federal Reserve Board, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may require the Federal Reserve banks to take such action as may be necessary, in the judgment of the board and of the Secretary of the Treasury, to prevent undue credit expansion.

"(b) If the Secretary, when directed by the President, is unable to secure the assent of the several Federal Reserve banks and the Federal Reserve Board to the agreements authorized in this section, or if operations under above provisions prove to be inadequate to meet the purposes of this section, or if for any other reason additional measures are required in the judgment of the President to meet such purposes, then the President is authorized—

Can Fix Both Gold and Silver.

"2. By proclamation to fix the weight of the gold dollar in grains nine-tenths fine and also to fix the weight of the silver dollar in grains nine-tenths fine at a definite fixed ratio in relation to the gold dollar at such amounts as he finds necessary from his investigation to stabilize domestic prices or to protect the foreign commerce against the adverse effect of depreciated foreign currencies, and to provide for the unlimited coinage of such gold and silver at the ratio so fixed, or in case the Government of the United States enters into an agreement with any government or governments under the terms of which the ratio between the value of gold and other currency issued by the United States and by any such government or governments is established, the President may fix the weight of the gold dollar in accordance with the ratio so agreed upon, and such gold dollar, the weight of which is so fixed, shall be the standard unit of value, and all forms of money issued or coined by the United States shall be maintained at a parity with this standard, and it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to maintain such parity, but in no event shall the weight of the gold dollar be fixed so as to reduce its present weight by more than 50 per centum. Nor shall the weight of the gold dollar be fixed in any event at more than 60 per centum of its present weight. The powers of the President specified in this paragraph shall be deemed to be separate, distinct and continuing powers and may be exercised by him, from time to time, severally or together, whenever and as the expressed objects of this section in his judgment may require; except that such powers shall expire two years after the date of enactment of the gold reserve act of 1934 unless the President shall sooner declare the existing emergency ended, but the President may extend such period for not more than one additional year after such date by proclamation recognizing the continuance of such emergency;" and—

Finds Trade Harmed.

Whereas, I find, upon investigation, that the foreign commerce of the United States is adversely affected by reason of the depreciation in the value of the currencies of oer governments in relation to the present standard value of gold, and that an economic emergency requires an expansion of credit; and

Whereas, in my judgment, measures additional to those provided by subsection (a) of said section 43 are required to meet the purposes of such section; and

Whereas, I find, from my investigation, that, in order to stabilize domestic prices and to protect the foreign commerce against the adverse effect of depreciated foreign currencies, it is necessary to fix the weight of the gold dollar at 15 5-21 grains nine-tenths fine;

Now, therefore, be it known that I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States, by virtue of the authority vested in me by section 43, title III of said act of May 12, 1933, as amended, and by virtue of all other authority vested in me, do hereby proclaim, order, direct, declare and fix the weight of the gold dollar to be 15 5-21 grains nine-tenths fine, from and after the date and hour of this proclamation. The weight of the silver dollars is not altered or affected in any manner by reason of this proclamation.

In Force Indefinitely.

This proclamation shall remain in force and effect until and unless repealed or modified by act of Congress or by susequent proclamation; and notice is hereby given that I reserve the right by virtue of the authority vested in me to alter or modify this proclamation as the interest of the United States may seem to require

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and have caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Dne in the City of Washington at 3:10 o'clock in the afternoon, Eastern standard time, this 31st day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and thirty-four, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and fifty-eighth.

Mrs. Burton L. French Dies at Home in Idaho

Mrs. Burton L. French, wife of former Representative French, of Idaho, died at Moscow, Idaho, yesterday, according to telegrams received by friends here yesterday. Funeral services will be held tomorrow at Moscow at 2 p. m., with burial in that city.

Representative and Mrs. French were well known in Congressional and official circles in Washington. The former was a member of the Congress for many years. He was defeated at the last election.

59-Cent Dollar Is Proclaimed By President

another inflationary effect was produced, tending to send the dollar down, stock and commodity prices upward.

He might note, also, that bankers and economists expect a much- accelerated reflow of capital back to this country, now that much uncertainty about the dollar's value is removed; that the Treasury believes it will be able readily to sell $5,000,000,000 or more of bonds, needed to finance the New Deal—for the fixing of the dollar at a known level is tantamount to its stabilization. True, Mr. Roosevelt can cut the gold content again—down to a 50-cent dollar. But for the present he has decreed a 59.06-cent dollar and taken steps to effectuate it, measured by its value in foreign exchange.

The dollar has been hovering around 63 cents, measured by the gold franc. Treasury experts think it will quickly hit the 59.06 cent level, as decreedfi where it can be held through operation of the stabilization fund. They think it will be necessary to buy much more gold in order to accomplish this effect. They argue that this will enhance prices of articles entering into international trade, that in time it will be reflected back in higher prices of all commodities.

New Life in Trade Forecast.

Economists who differ with Prof. Warren about gold price manipulations, who think that many other factors are more influential than gold in determining prices, nevertheless see the possibility that the new moves will lift the fears overhanging private capital and that the reflow of money back to these shores and the return of timid money into investment or speculation will stimulate all sorts of activity.

What Mr. Roosevelt did yesterday, under the authority of the gold bill signed the day before, was to cut the number of grains of pure gold in the dollar from 23.22 to 13.71. Since 1873 the law has specified 25.8 grains of gold, nine-tenths fine, to the dollar. This works out at a price of $20.67 an ounce for pure gold. Mr. Roosevelt set the gold content of the dollar at 15 5-21 grains, nine-tenths fine, and that works out to a price of $35 an ounce. This, in turn, means that the dollar as now decreed is worth but 59.06 per cent of its former gold value.

Round Figures Easier.

This was as close to the expected 60-cent dollar as the Administration could come and still have a round, $35, as the price to be paid for gold. For convenience—for reasons of higher mathematics, as Mr. Roosevelt put it—the Administration advisers decided to have the round figure $35 and the uneven one, the 59.06 cent gold dollar. This was because they expected the $35 an ounce rate will be much more used in coming computations than the gold grain value in the dollar.

The President signed his momentous proclamation at 3:10 o'clock and eagerly announced it at a 4 o'clock press conference, urging the press to get it quickly on the wires so that the New York gold market would have the benefit of the knowledge while the foreign markets were shrouded in darkness because of time differences. The New York gold market, he explained, stayed open until 5 o'clock or later, while the stock market already was closed.

Huge "Profit" At Once.

The proclamation automatically put on the Treasury books a "profit" of about $2,700,000,000—the Treasury statisticians have not yet worked it out exactly—derived from the revaluation of the gold stocks commandeered by the gold bill from the Federal Reserve system. The gold bill establishes from this fund the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, which is to operated secretly like the British equalization fund of nearly the same amount.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., has command over this huge sum. He already has chosen two or three advisers, experts in foreign exchange, to assist him, according to Treasury information. The names of these experts will not be officially disclosed—or unofficially, if the Treasury can keep them secret.

One of the first questions raised by yesterday's history-making moves is the effect on the British, French and other foreign powers. Some authorities thing the British will agree to a de facto stabilization as soon as the dollar conforms in exchange to the arbitrary decreed price and that our stabilization fund and the British equalization fund will be operated to hold that figure, although it would make the pound much higher than the British have wanted it to be in dollars, perhaps around $5.25, a rise of possible 30 cents in round numbers.

However, apart from the uncertainty remaining because of the President's authority to devalue the dollar still more—giving him a leewa yto combat foreign competitive depreciation—there are many elements of uncertainty in the foreign reflexes, including the question of repatriation of American foreign balances. They have been estimated at $2,000,000,000, although nobody knows exactly. How much will now flow back to this country? How much foreign capital will venture over here for investment or speculation?

French Face Danger.

If a very large flood of American funds were to return, or if a very large volume of foreign funds were to flow here, a heavy strain on the gold reserves of the gold bloc countries, notably France, might ensue. It is impossible to forecast with any accuracy what the extent of the strain might be or the rate at which it would take place. If it were to take place slowly or gradually, the new gold coming upon the London market would be a material factor in offsetting it. If the flow of funds, American and foreign, to this side were to proceed at a rapid rate, the gold coming on the foreign markets would be insignificant as an offset.

The gold bloc countries all have large excess supplies of gold which they could use if they wished to meet the drains Another uncertain factor is the amount of foreign floating bang balances in this country. Still another is the extent of repatriation of funds already accomplished. A considerable inflow has been reported since the President narrowed the gold content leeway down to a 50-60-cent gold dollar. If the movement is to continue and increase greatly, the drain upon foreign central banks of countries still on the gold standard would be increased proportionately.

The possibility of foreign self-protective measures, such as embargoes on the export of gold and capital to this side, or departure of the gold countries from the gold standard, depends largely on what happens as the aftermath of the President's decision to enforce the $35 an ounce world gold price.

Candidate Heflin Feels "Confident"

Former Senator Writes on Senate Letterhead.

J. Thomas Heflin lost his place in the United States Senate—but not his confidence, according to the Associated Press.

Out after the House seat held by Representative Miles Allgood, of Alabama, he asked his foe to place his name on the Congressional Record mailing list.

Allgood complied and yesterday he received this letter:

"Dear Miles: Thank you for sending me the Congressional Record. I will do as much for you sometime. With best wishes, I am yours sincerely, J. Thomas Heflin."

The letter, from Lafayette, Ala., was on United States Senate stationery in Heflin's hand.

President's Gold Statement

Value Now $35 Per Ounce, With Right Reserved to Effect Change at Any Time in Dollar Contest; Treasury to Profit on Seizure.

The following statement was given out yesterday at the White House in relation to the new revalued dollar:

"1. Acting under the powers granted by title 3 of the act approved May 12, 1933 (Thomas amendment to the farm relief act), the President today issued a proclamation fixing the weight of the gold dollar at 15-5/21 grains nine-tenths fine. This is 59.06 plus per cent of the former weight of 25-8/10 grains nine-tenths fine, as fixed by section 1 of the act of Congress of March 4, 1900. The new gold content of the dollar becomes effective immediately on the signing of the proclamation by the President.

"Under the gold reserve act of 1934, signed by the President Tuesday, January 30, title to the entire stock of monetary gold in the United States, including the gold coin and gold bullion heretofore held by the Federal Reserve banks and the claim upon gold in the Treasury represented by gold certificates, is vested in the United States Government and the "profit" from the reduction of the gold content of the dollar, made effective by today's proclamation, accrues to the United States Treasury.

"Of this 'profit' $2,000,000,000, under the terms of the gold reserve act and of today's proclamation, constitutes a stabilization fund under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury. The balance will be covered into the general fund of the Treasury.

New Certificates Prepared.

"Settlement for the gold coin, bullion and certificates taken over from the Federal Reserve banks on Tuesday upon the approval of the act was made in the form of credits set up on the Treasury's books. This credit due the Federal Reserve banks is to be paid in the new form of gold certificates now in course of producton by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. These certificates bear on their face the wording:

"'This is to certify that there is on deposit in the Treasury of the United States of America ..... dollars in gold, payable to bearer on demand as authorized by law.'

"They also will carry the standard legal tender clause, which is as follows:

"'This certificate is a legal tender in the amount thereof in payment of all debts and dues public and private.'

"The new gold certificates will be of the same size as other currency in circulation and the only difference, other than the changes in wording noted above, is that the back of the new certificates will as used to be done be printed in yellow ink. The certificates will be in denominations up to $100,000.

Holds Right to Change.

"In his proclamation the President gives notice that he reserves the right, by virtue of the authority vested in him, to alter or modify the present proclamation as the interest of the United States may seem to require. The authority by later proclamations to accomplish other revaluations of the dollar in terms of gold is contained in the gold reserve act signed on Tuesday.

"2. The Secretary of the Treasury, with the approval of the President, issued a public announcement that beginning February 1, 1934, he will buy through the Federal Reserve Bank of New York as fiscal agent, for the account of the United States, any and all gold delivered to any United States mints or the assay offices in New York or Seattle, at the rate of $35 per fine Troy ounce, less the usual mint charges and less one-fourth of 1 per cent for handling charges. Purchases, however, are subject to compliance with regulations issued under the gold reserve act of 1934.

"3. The Secretary of the Treasury today promulgated new regulations with respect to the purchase and sale of gold by the mints. Under these regulations the mints are authorized to purchase gold recovered from natural deposits in the United States or any place subject to its jurisdiction.

Gold Purchases Limited.

"Unmelted scrap gold, gold imported into the United States after January 30, 1934, and such other gold as may be authorized from time to time by rulings of the Secretary of the Treasury. No gold, however, may be purchased which has been held in noncompliance with previous acts or orders, or noncompliance with the gold reserve act of 1934, or these regulations. Affidavits as to the source from which the gold was obtained are required, except in the case of nuggets or dust of less than 5 ounces, where a statement under oath will suffice. In the case of imported gold, the mints may purchase only that which has been in customs custody after its arrival in the continental United States."

"The price to be paid for gold purchased by the mints is to be $35 per troy ounce of fine gold, less one-fourth of 1 per cent and less mint charges. This price may be changed by the Secretary of the Treasury at any time without notice.

"The mints are authorized to sell gold to persons licensed to acquire it for use in the industries, professions, or arts, but not to sell more than is required for a three months' supply for the purchaser.

"The price at which gold is to be sold by the mints will be $35 per troy ounce, plus one-fourth of 1 per cent. This price also may be changed by the Secretary of the Treasury without notice."

After unsuccessfully fishing with pole and hook, Carrier spied the finny thief and shot him with a rifle. The false molars were found inside the 8-pound jackfish.

4 Auto Deaths In Week Shock AugustaCounty

Trucks Kill Woman, Boy, and Youth; Hit-Run Charge Filed.

Waynesboro, Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.). Four automobile deaths have shocked this community this week.

Richard H. Simmons, 12, Fishersville High School youth, was crushed under a truck driven by John Croft. Witnesses said he slipped while attempting to board the truck. Dr. Glenn C. Campbell, county coroner, and State Traffic Officer L. J. Cosby exonerated Croft.

Everett Woodson, 21, is dead and Nelson Lawson is held under bail on a manslaughter charge as the result of an accident at Wheeler's Cove. Woodson was crushed to death when a truck allegedly driven by Lawson rolled over an embankment. Lawson will get a hearing February 15 before Justice P. K. Kidd.

Miss Harriet E. Russell, 30, daughter of Albert E. Russell, of this city, died in a Greenwich, Conn., hospital from injuries received in the collision of a truck with a car, in which she was a passenger. Ralph Guhney, manager of a New York hotel, driver of the car, is being held under $2,500 bond, pending inquiry. Mr. and Mrs. Clifford A. Trowbridge and Frederick Pearce were injured.

Kilmer Wilson, 23, of near West View, was killed by a hit-and-run driver in front of the West View Church. Officers R. A. Lynn and J. B. L. Long arrested Lester E. Tolley, 25, and say he confessed striking Wilson.

JOHN NANCE GARNER, Vice President. The Alexander Throttlebottom of real life began it, auspiciously for a political career, in a log cabin at Blossom Prairie, Red River County, Tex. Early years in the saddle under the blistering sun originated the stiff legged cow country walk and the ruddy complexion, now set off by the bristling white hair and eyebrows. "Cactus Jack" as a judge at 22, a congressman at 34. Who's Who notes that he "had limited school advantages." His famous talent at poker is extra-curricula. He tutored such notables as his predecessor, Charles Curtis, and his long-time intimate friend, the late Nick Longworth, whom he supplanted as Speaker of the House.

He was the only Speaker to forego the limousine perquisite. Unique in Capital annals is the role Mrs. Garner ably occupied for more than 30 years as her husband's secretary. Dining out, which the Garners shunned for years, is now compulsory. He escapes from the obscurity of office, summer-times, by going back to Uvalde, in the Rio Grande country, to raise sweet potatoes and pecans. Can be seen daily presiding over the Senate. If not there, try the Bureau of Education.

Friends Push Burch as Next State Executive

Virginia Representative Is Silent; Has Filled Many Posts.

(Associated Press.)

Friends of Representative Thomas G. Burch, of Martinsville, Va., are discussing him as a possible Democratic candidate for governor in 1937.

George C. Peery had hardly become accustomed to furnishings of the executive offices before the Burch talk started.

These friends are pointing out his long service in the inner circle of the Democratic organization, his wide acquaintance among politicians, and his work in Congress.

A well-schooled politician who realizes that much can happen in the three and a half years Burch is not commenting on the subject. Obviously he is complimented.

Byrd Says Field Is Open.

Senator Byrd, head of the Democratic organization in Vriginia, says the field is wide open. He had made no commitments, he says, in fact, has not even discussed the matter with anyone who might have aspirations.

Burch was on the State Democratic committee 30 years before he came to Washington, and was chairman of the Fifth Congressional District 12 years.

He had been before the people only once before his election to Congress in 1930. His fellow citizens of Martinsville chose him as mayor in 1912 and he served until the following year, when he was appointed United States marshal for the Western District of Virginia.

On Postoffice Committee.

His public service includes that on the Byrd State reorganization commission, the board of agriculture and the board of education.

He has been on the exclusive Postoffice and Post Roads Committee since the House organized in 1931. Twice the Virginia delegation has proposed him for Ways and Means Committee.

Politics has been Burch's diversion throughout his long business career. He has few others. Reading and an occasional movie or sports event round out his life.

More Snakes

CWA Workers Find Three Near Mount Jackson.

Mount Jackson, Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.). Cold weather in this section of the Shenandoah Valley, causing many members of the human family to subside into a state of hibernation, seems not to have affected reptilian denizens.

CWA employes engaged on Mount Jackson's water line project yesterday found a blacksnake and two deadly copperhead snakes where excavations were being made. Despite the near-zero weather the snakes showed definite signs of life and did not appear to be in the dormant stage.

Richmond, Jan. 31 (AP).—Proposals to loosen the Sunday laws to permit motion pictures and athletic events were championed and denounced at a public hearing before the House committee on moral and social welfare.

Gov. Peery has signed the bill abolishing the Corporation Court of the City of Hopewell and transferring all causes, actions and proceedings now pending in the court to the Circuit Court of the same city, and also transferring Grover C. Alderman, clerk, to the Circuit Court.

Surety Firm Sues to Annul Widow's Policy

E. D. Shriner, Jr., Faces $25,555 Tax Action Divorce Plea.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 31 (Spl.). Alleging misrepresentation and fraud, the Continental American Life Insurance Co. has entered suit in circuit court seeking to rescind the insurance policy, issued June 17, 1932, to Joseph C. Moser, near Myersville, who died last fall.

The beneficiary is Mrs. Almetta S. Moser, wife of the deceased. The policy was for $1,000. The company charges Moser misled it regarding his health.

A suit to recover $25,555.89 on income taxes was filed in the court against Edward D. Shriner, jr., by Lewis W. Milbourne, representing the Internal Revenue Bureau. Taxes are said to be for 1929 and 1930. Informed sources said the major part of the amount might be due from the estate of the defendant's father, the late Edward J. Shriner, who died April 30, 1930.

The amount sought includes penalties put at $7 389.60 and $3,387.08 interest.

Divorce proceedings were filed in Baltimore yesterday against Mr. Shriner by Mrs. Elizabeth E. Shriner, who charges desertion.

American Cattle Shipped to Peru

22 Chickens Taken Along to Pacify Stock.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.).—Carrying 183 bulls, heifers, sheep and hogs and 22 chickens, the American steamer Nora King sailed yesterday for Callao, Peru. The live stock is from the West and will be used for breeding purposes in South America.

The roosters and hens are being taken along to pacify the cattle during the long voyage.

It is a custom of the sea to send cackling hens and crowing roosters with a shipment of cattle on any ship, it was stated. The cattle, seamen say, are less likely to become homesick if they hear the crow of a rooster or the cackle of a hen.

ROSE HOBART is a 14

CECILIA LOFTUS is a 38

Both know the Sweet Secret

CECILIA LOFTUS . . . loved by theatregoers of two continents, her latest success being "A Party."

Perhaps you've wondered: "What kind of foundations do these stage stars wear? . . . they look so sleekly perfect, yet so entirely at ease."

We've asked these two great favorites—Miss Loftus and Miss Hobart—to tell you!

● Miss Hobart said: "Any foundation that I wear just has to be light and soft and flexible—though, of course, I want a certain amount of control, too. I've found the perfect solution in two-way stretch Sensations. They bend when I do just as if they were part of me! I can't describe how grand they feel."

● Miss Loftus said: "I was so intrigued with Miss Hobart's Sensation foundation that I was determined to find a two-way stretch in a style suitable to my figure.

"Then I discovered that the same manufacturer has just developed a marvelous collection of two-way stretch foundations called Nemolastiks for more substantial figures. They were just what I had in mind, and after wearing one I must say I've never known such comfort!"

"SENSATIONS"

are ideal for slender figures. Young girls choose them for their first foundations—slender women of all ages adore them for their care-free comfort. Sensations are made in many styles—girdles and combinations. Sensations restrain without any feeling of restraint. They are light, soft, amazingly flexible.

"NEMOLASTIK"

foundations make two-way stretch comfort possible for heavier figures! A special two-way stretch fabric was created for Nemolastiks—with twice as heavy cross-wise strands, for double control. The up-and-down strands are single, permitting easy freedom. In girdles and combinations.

Cross Manor, built by Sir Thomas Cornwalys, one of Leonard Calvert's famous band of Maryland founders, in 1642, is shown above. Said to be the oldest house standing in the State today, it is a perfectly preserved manor of colonial days. Mrs. Charles S. Grayson, whose family has lived in Cross Manor for six generations, is pictured with one of the many valuable relics contained in the old house—a book, dated 1693, which once belonged in the library of St. Mary's City in the days when it was Maryland's first capital.

By Marion Butler.

St. Marys City, Md., Jan. 31 (Spl.). Cross Manor is getting ready for guests again.

Three centuries have not dimmed the traditional hospitality of Maryland's oldest home. On the lawns that slope down to St. Inigoes Creek, the boxwood has been trimmed, and within the quaint walls the fine old paneling and carving of Leonard Calvert's day is burnished to a mellow glow.

Quietly renewing this seventeenth century beauty, a tiny figure that might have stepped out of one of her own colonial sketchbooks moves through the old rooms. It is Mrs. Charles S. Grayson, who has spent 71 years of life at Cross Manor.

Visitors Arrive Early.

"Every spring," Mrs. Grayson explains, "visitors come from all over the State to see the home that was built by one of Maryland's first settlers. But this year, because of tercentenary celebration, they are arriving so far ahead of schedule I can hardly get ready for them."

"You see," she smiles, "I want them to see Cross Manor just as it looked when Lord Calvert visited here."

Cross Manor was completed in 1642, only eight years after the Ark and Dove carried Maryland's first colonists up St. Marys River. Sir Thomas Cornwalys, lieutenant governor and Leonard Calvert's right-hand man, built his home in good old English style on a tiny peninsula jutting out into St. Inigoes Creek. Not 3 miles across the water was St. Marys City, then the capital of the province.

Set in the midst of an Indian wilderness, Cornwalys' lands extended over 4,000 acres, according to an ancient crown grant, dated 1663. Although today the property has dwindled to only 200 acres, his manor still stands as remote as ever, its nearest village, Beachville, 6 miles away, its only means of access—quet country lanes or the river on which Cornwalys is said to have made his daily journeys between home and capital.

Bricks Present Enigma.

Except for the addition of a third story and a kitchen wing, both of which are nearly 200 years old, Cross Manor stands just as it was first constructed. Its imperishable red bricks have defied time and, as Mrs. Grayson points out, like those of old St. Marys statehouse—now forming the walls of St. Marys Trinity Episcopal Church—still remain a mystery to modern scientists. Historians believe the bricks were imported from England, but architects insist they were handfashioned close by in some forgotten clay pit.

Protected by a few coatings of paint, the original quaint window casements still do duty at Cross Manor, despite a thousand river storms. Curious keys, 6 inches long, fitting keyholes that look like miniature windows, are used to lock the same massive doors that Lord Calvert passed through many a time. Even the exquisite hand-carved arch in the hall, the steep old staircase and the paneling for which the manor is famous, show none of the wear and tear of constant use.

All the years she has lived at Cross Manor, Mrs. Grayson has worked to preserve its seventeenth century atmsophere. None of the new machinery and inventions of modern times have been given entrance here. Electricity, gas and modern piping are taboo. Water is taken from an old pump or clear spring. Log fires are kindled in a huge old-fashioned Franklin stove, or in the great fireplaces which warm even the bedrooms.

It is still customary for holiday dinners to be served on the original fine, old dining room table under the flickering light of candles which are put out after the festivities by curious silver candle snuffers. Still topping the menus for state occasions are old-time Maryland hams, smoked and aged 18 months in the identical tiny, brick smokehouse that did duty for the Cornwalys' feasts of pioneer days.

Many Maryland relics that could not be duplicated anywhere are cherished behind Cross Manor's sturdy walls. Especially prized by Mrs. Grayson this tercentenary year is an old gallery post which once belonged in the original old State House of 1676 at St. Marys City—a replica of which building is now being constructed under the direction of the Maryland Tercentenary Commission. This aged post is fastened together with wood pegs instead of nails. It has been handed down in Mrs. Grayson's family since the old State House was torn down in 1829.

Other unique St. Marys City relics, reminiscent of the days when this tiny town was considered the proudest capital in the colonies, are two huge books from the official library of the old city. They bear the dates, 1693 and 1752. Both were printed in London, one at the Unicorn, at the west end of St. Paul's Church yard, the other in Martholomew lane, at the south gate of the Royal Exchange.

The first is a "New History of Eccleslastical Writers," the second a strange old "Merchant's Directory," printed for George II. In quaint lettering on the scarred leather covers is the inscription, "Belonged to the Library of St. Marys."

In a place of honor above the three-century-old mantel in the parlor is the first deed, and perhaps the first paper, printed at St. Marys City. The paper is so yellowed with age that the words "Conditions of Sale of the Right Honorable Lord Baltimore" are hardly decipherable.

300-Year-Old Boxwood.

Though Mrs. Grayson treasures her historical curios, she takes greatest pride in the huge English boxwood on the lawn. These display the loving care which she has given to them all her life.

"They were the first box planted in Maryland," she will tell you gazing at the 300-year-old hedges, backed by the blue waters of the river.

Six generations of Mrs. Grayson's family have lived at Cross Manor. They bought it over 200 years ago from the heirs of Sir Thomas Cornwalys. On February 6, 1862, Mrs. Grayson was born in this old house, where, in a few days, she will celebrate her seventy-second birthday. Despite hundreds of tercentenary visitors thronging Cross Manor this year, Mrs. Grayson will remain true to the old Southern tradition of the "open door."

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 31 (Spl.).—Girls in their late teens, and women of mature years, many of them mothers, returned to school last night, and participated in the organization of Anne Arundel County's first school for adult education.

Attendance at a meeting in the public schoolhouse at Arnold's, Third District, indicated enrollment in the several classes would exceed the minimum requirement of ten.

Mrs. D. Ellwood Williams, jr., of Arnold's, first proposed the school. Funds for it were made available by the Civil Works Administration. The State department of education is supervising the school, with the county board of education cooperating. Instructors have been recruited from the ranks of the unemployed, and it is planned to extend the school into all parts of the county.

Decision Limits Stock Damage In W. Virginia

Court Absolves Owner if Animal Is Freed by Third Party.

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.).—Contention that the owner of an escaped stock animal is not liable for damages done by that animal when its escape is the fault of a disinterested third party, received it first West Virginia judicial sanction in a ruling issued yesterday by Circuit Court Judge D. H. Rogers.

Dispute as to such an owner's responsibility arose during the suit of Alice B. James against Adrian C. Billmyer for damages to Miss James' automobile when it struck a bull owned by Mr. Billmyer.

On the strength of this ruling from the bench, the jury brought in a directed verdict today in favor of Mr. Billmyer after evidence showed the bull's escape was due to an unknown third person.

Charles Campbell, attorney for Miss James, had objected to introduction of defense evidence showing the animal had escaped from Mr. Billmyer's pasture through a break in the fence, made by an unknown automobile. Campbell insisted on absolute liability of Mr. Billmyer, regardless.

Defense Attorneys Frank L. and Lee Bushong contended strict construction of the statute would make the defendant responsible for events beyond his control.

Judge Rogers overruled Campbell's objection saying the term "running at large" in the statute did not apply to animals escaped through actions of a third party. He allowed the defense evidence to be presented.

West Virginia Launches Quiz On Civil Works

Opening Is Featured by Federal Protest and G.O.P. Denial.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.).—Opening of a joint legislative probe here today into the Civil Works Administration in West Virginia was featured by a Federal protest from Washington and Republican denial that a Republican party machine was being built up.

The Washington protest came in a telegram from Howard O. Hunter, field representative of Federal agencies. He declared that in view of the fact that during the last year the Federal Government has spent well over $20,000,000 for relief and Civil Works wages in West Virginia, as against practically nothing by the State itself, it seemed "ridiculous and absurd for disgruntled persons in the Legislature or otherwise to appoint committees to investigate the Federal Government or the State Civil Works Administration who are all direct appointments of the Federal Administration."

He assured cooperation, however, in a thorough probe of any questionable practices.

Walter S. Hallanan, of Charleston, Republican National committeeman for West Virginia, denied charges by United States Senator M. M. Neely that the relief agency was being utilized to erect a Republican machine. He characterized the controversy as a contest between rival Democratic factions in the State for control of "the tremendous job-giving power" of the CWA. Hundreds of letters received by him, he added, convinced him there could be "no substantial basis" for the charge that William N. Beehler, State Civil Works administrator, had "been dispensing favors to Republicans."

Says G. O. P. Got Nothing.

He declared "Republicans have received nothing and know Democratic politics sufficiently well not to expect anything."

Senator A. C. Herold (Democrat), Braxton, is chairman of the committee before which nuemrous men and women appeared to complain that they could not obtain needed jobs.

Charges of nepotism and lax cooperation were heard from witnesses at the House of Delegates' probe into CWA activities in Braxton County today at Sutton.

A. B. Berry, State supervisor of roads in the county and former sheriff, said that Mrs. Erma Hyre, Braxton CWA administrator, had referred all dismissals of workers to Fred Hawkins, assistant administrator; that capable road workers had been turned down for other men; that G. Roy Holland, brother-in-law of W. H. Hickman, CWA purchasing agent, had been appointed to a project over his head, and that the county administration had failed to cooperate with him.

Employment Bill Signed.

Gov. Kump today signed a bill appropriating $5,000 for establishment of permanent employment offices in the State in cooperation with the Federal Government. Federal funds of $150,000 are available for the purpose. The State Labor Department has planned to open the offices in Wheeling, Charleston, and Clarksburg or Fairmont. Gov. Kump also signed bills regulating the junk business, permitting the filing of historical documents at West Virginia University, and fixing park tax rates at Huntington.

Sixteen other acts became effective at midnight without the Governor's signature. One provides for renewal of teaching certificates without summer school attendance, and another authorizes a general transfer of unexpended balances from county road funds to general funds. The others, all local measures, included 11 enabling use of PWA funds in various projects.

A successor will be recommended by the Randolph County Court as a member of the board and the board will elect a new chairman.

The State CWA announces appointment of Kerr Blaine, of Point Pleasant, as chairman of the Mason County CWA committee to succeed D. E. Yates, resigned. Miss Osie England had been serving as temporary chairman.

M. H. Fairbanks Will Be Puerto Rican Manager for Credit Body.

Chestertown, Md., Jan. 31 (Spl.).—Miles H. Fairbanks, of Baltimore, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland Farm Bureau Federation for the past year, last night announced his resignation.

Speaking at the annual banquet and meeting of the Kent County Farm Bureau, he said on March 1 he will become manager for Puerto Rico of the Production Credit Association of the United States Department of Agriculture. The announcement came as a surprise. Fairbanks has been taking a prominent part in the new agricultural set-up in Maryland under the Roosevelt Administration. He is a native of Stevensville, in Queen Annes County.

Production credit was discussed by Harry T. Nuttle, of the Caroline County Farm Bureau. Edgar R. Pennington was toastmaster and Secretary James D. Davis, jr., submitted his annual report, showing improved conditions on Kent County farms.

The island of Puerto Rico is included in the Baltimore territory, and Fairbanks will organize Production Credit Associations there. He is a director of the Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation and a member of other farm organizations.

Clarksburg Denied State Tax Relief

Official Rules Against Transfer for Expenses.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.).—After a group of Clarksburg city officials, headed by James S. Rodney, city manager, carried the city's tax plight to Fred L. Fax, the State tax commissioner said today their plea for relief could not be granted.

City officials failed to fix levies in accordance with the new Hiner tax collection law, and told Fax the city could not function under the allocation of 70 per cent of its tax receipts for operating purposes and 30 per cent for bonded debt charges unless the difference permitted in the latter above bond requirements could be used for the former.

The group pointed out that the city debt charges, smallest of any city of its size in the State, required an allotment of only 11½ per cent of the sum for this purpose.

Fox ruled, however, that none of the 30 per cent could be transferred to current expense budgets by any city, although not required for debts.

CHESTNUT FARMS PASTEURIZED GRADE A MILK PENN. AVE. & 26 ST. CHEVY CHASE

EFFECTIVE February first, all bottles containing Chestnut Farms–Chevy Chase "Special" Milk will be sealed with our new cap. This conforms with a new ruling of the District Health Department on all regular pasteurized milk. This cap will bear the words "Grade A Milk."

This new name will bring nothing new to our own customers. It involves no change whatsoever in the quality of our "Special" Milk. For years we have maintained the standards of our "Special" Milk at a quality level definitely higher than Grade A requirements elsewhere.

Chestnut Farms–Chevy Chase Milk is much richer than is required by the District Health Department. It has a far greater cream content. Added nourishment comes with a deep cream layer. Our aim has always been to supply our customers with the finest bottle of milk in the world. The purity attained through our field inspection service and our model pasteurizing facilities is in keeping with our reputation of conducting the world's model dairy.

We assure the customers of Chestnut Farms–Chevy Chase that with this new cap we will continue to serve milk which is much purer and richer than the law requires.

Corn-Hog Plan Being Outlined For Frederick

Meetings Explain Slash Program; Farm Loans and Checks Gain.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.).—A series of meetings in the interest of the Federal corn-hog reduction program were inaugurated in Frederick County by County Agent I. Fred Stine, with the first meeting tonight at White Hall. Tomorrow night there will be a mass meeting at Reynolds Store and Friday night another at Mountain Falls.

Saturday afternoon a general meeting of all farmers will be held in the courthouse here. Beginning Monday special district meetings will be held. The first will be for Stonewall at the county agent's office here. Others include Opequon, Wednesday; Stephens City School, Shawnee, Friday, county agent's office here; Gainesboro, February 12, Cross Junction, and Back Creek, February 14, place to be announced.

115 Get Wheat Checks.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.). Last night 115 farmers of this area received bonus wheat checks, 49 Stafford County farmers receiving $1,717 and 66 King George farmers $3,755, a total of $5,472.

Members of the Wheat Production Control Association formed jointly by these two counties will have received more than $7,000 after the $1,800 spring allotment is disbursed. Checks distributed last night ranged from less than $10 to the $230.80, which went to Judge Alvin T. Embrey's Hopyard Farm.

W. L. Browning, chairman of the county organization, says a corn-hog reduction campaign will net the farmers more than twice this amount.

Farm Loans Mount.

Staunton, Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.).—During January, Augusta County farmers have borrowed from the Federal Land bank of Baltimore, or the Federal Land bank commissioner, $84,300, according to figures made public by Francis H. Bear, of this city, local secretary of the two agencies.

For the last three months in 1933 they borrowed $200,900; or a total of $285,200 for the past four months.

During October, November and December 17 land bank loans were closed, totaling $168,300, and 35 commissioner loans, representing $92,600.

In January ten land bank loans were closed, $43,000 being involved, and 23 commissioner loans, $41,300.

Most of the loans in Augusta County were for refinancing purposes, Mr. Bear said.

The largest bank loan was for $15,000, the smallest, $1,500. The largest commissioner loan amounted to $5,000; the smallest, $500.

According to the Federal Land Bank, 1,673 Virginia farmers have received $4,233,000 in loans from the bank and from the land commissioner, through the Baltimore bank, from May 1 to December 31, 1933.

Richmond, Jan. 31 (AP).—Denouncing what he termed "a conspiracy in the fertilizer industry against farmers and farm organizations," Dr. T. K. Wolfe, manager of the fertilizer department of Southern States Cooperative, said that his organization is appealing to the President for relief.

A telegram dispatched yesterday to President Roosevelt said:

"Producers of fertilizers and fertilizer materials under the code of fair competition for the fertilizer industry are demanding unjustifiably high prices for fertilizers and materials. Producers are either refusing to sell to farmers cooperative associations or are applying such prices as to deprive farmers of the advantages normally and reasonably gained from cooperative purchasing. We feel that the major companies in the fertilizer industry have entered into a conspiracy to overcharge farmers for fertilizer and to prevent effective cooperative action on the part of farmers in the purchase of their fertilizers needs."

The Southern States Cooperative has members in Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina.

Similar telegrams were dispatched to Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson and to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.).—A regional meeting of hatchery men will be held here tomorrow to plan enforcement of the hatchery code.

This regional area includes Floyd, Montgomery, Craig, Giles, Roanoke, Franklin, Henry, Patrick, Alleghany and Botetourt Counties.

Danville, Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.).—Of the tobacco planters of Pittsylvania County, 97 per cent have signed the 30 per cent reduction agreement, says J. E. Stone, county demonstration agent. He calls it the greatest cooperative venture ever undertaken by the growers of this section.

Herb Medicine Man, Dead at 71, Was Renowned as Clairvoyant

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.).—John H. Pinkard, Negro herb doctor of Roanoke for many years, who built up a wide practice on his reputed ability to diagnose his patient's trouble without any examination or asking questions, is dead at 71.

With a reputation as a clairvoyant as well as a physician, "Dr." Pinkard attracted a large following, not only among the colored citizenry but also among many white persons, far and near. He was a native of Franklin County and was believed the wealthiest Negro in Roanoke.

Pinkard was credited with having made an extensive study of botany and with using effective combinations of herbs in curative medicines which he concocted and prescribed.

Pinkard developed what is known as "Pinkard's Court" here, a suburb for the more affluent Negroes. He also held real estate in Florida once valued at $100,000. Death followed an illness of a month.

Court to Test Cedar Crusade

Cutting Drive in Valley to End Menace to Orchards Appealed.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.). Judge Philip Williams and a jury in circuit court of Frederick County will be called upon to rule on the legality of the "cedar cutting" campaigns in Frederick County, during which groups of men have been destroying young cedar trees over an extensive area where it was deemed their presence was a menace to commercial apple orchards.

When a group of cedar cutters, headed by Roy Boyce, designated to carry out the work, cut 525 young cedars on the property of Virginia McCarroll et als., the latter filed suit before Magistrate A. J. Tavenner here for $200 actual and punitive damages.

The plaintiffs alleged no notice of the intention of cutting the trees had been given them. Mr. Boyce and the cedar-cutting group claimed notice was given the plaintiffs in 1928 when the original growth of cedars was cut on the latter's land.

Magistrate Tavenner upheld the defendants and ruled the 1928 notice was effective so long as young cedars continued to sprout from the old roots or seedlings. The magistrate refused judgment, whereupon the plaintiffs appealed to the circuit court.

During the past month thousands of young cedar trees have been cut in Frederick County under the Virginia cedar rust law, which decreed cedars a menace to commercial apple orchard by reason of the alleged prevalence of cedar rust on apples produced within a limited distance of growing cedars.

History Awry, Educator Says

America's Past Colored to Please the North, Virginian's View.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.). The role played by the historian in the making of history was the subject of a lecture tonight by Prof. Thomas P. Abernathy, of the University of Virginia. It was the third of a series of public lectures sponsored by the university faculty.

"Sectional bias has led to much contortion in the recording of our National annals," said Prof. Abernathy. He declared the feeling of sectionalism between North and South did not grow out of slavery or from the Civil War, but out of social antagonisms that are as old as the settlement of the American colonies.

He cited examples from the Revolutionary period to show that writers of the North have established orthodox interpretations of the history of that period that are, in most instances, unfavorable to the South.

Low price of New "JEWELED MOVEMENT" Car a Big Surprise

New LaFayette, created by Nash, a BIGGER low-priced car with costly construction features never before used in this field

GIANT WATCH ATTRACTS CROWDS! This big Gruen watch, ten times actual size, with its movement plainly visible, helps explain the "jeweled movement" LaFayette. The costly construction features in the new LaFayette work like the jewels in a fine watch—give it "big car" smoothness, long life and riding luxury

IT WAS ONE OF THE REALLY BIG SURPRISES of the New York show—the low price of this remarkable new car created by Nash.

Its sheer bigness is what first impressed the crowds. The new "jeweled movement" LaFayette is without question a bigger low-priced car—longer, heavier, roomier.

But there's something else—far more important. This new car brings you costly, proven construction features* never before put into an automobile of this price.

In the new LaFayette, just as in more expensive cars, these recognized engineering features work like jewels in a fine watch movement. They underlie that long-life silence and smoothness of power, that complete riding luxury, which you could formerly get only in "big cars" selling at much higher prices.

Every vital part of the new "jeweled movement" LaFayette has been tested and proved by Nash over a period of years. It is only because Nash has concentrated for years on high quality cars and has learned to build them more economically that the new LaFayette can be offered at its surprisingly low price.

See the new LaFayette at the Show. Notice its bigness, the rakish beauty of its Slipstream lines. Above all, get the full facts about its "jeweled movement". The Nash Motors Company, Kenosha, Wisconsin.

A BIGGER LOW-PRICED CAR $635 TO $695

NASH BUILT . . . THE NEW LAFAYETTE

The LaFayette has a 113 inch wheelbase; six cylinder, 75 horse power motor. In the Path of Icarus.

In the days of Greek mythology Icarus, the son of Daedalus, fled from Crete to escape the wrath of Minos. With his father, the young man is fabled to have ascended into the stratosphere on wings fastened to his body by wax. In defiance of his father's warning, Icarus flew too near the sun. He lost his wings when the heat melted their wax attachments, and fell into the Aegean Sea between the Cyclades and Caria, since known as the Icarian Sea.

The old myth sounds a bit strange since modern balloonists have ascended 12 or 13 miles above the earth and found extremely frigid temperatures and a rarity of atmosphere in which no human being could live. Yet the fate of the three Russians who set a new altitude record and lost their lives in the descent, affords a modern version of the ancient theme. They paid with their lives for the privilege of ascending to heights never before reached by human beings. Like Icarus, their names will be chronicled in the select lists of those who dared all for achievement, and by their very failure became immortal.

International Tax Reprisals.

The House Ways and Means Committee has approved a proposal authorizing penalty income taxes upon subsidiaries of foreign corporations whose governments discriminate against American branch establishments in matters of taxation. The recommended reprisals are aimed primarily against France, because that country has attempted to tax American branch concerns on income not received within the country. For example, if 10 per cent of the business of a foreign corporation is carried on in France, the French may undertake to assess a tax of 10 per cent on the total profits of the company, even if the local branch earns nothing.

No doubt France, like the United States, loses revenue justly due her because of intercompany accounting practices designed to reduce the amount of taxable income shown by the branch establishment. However, neither the French efforts to meet this situation by arbitrary assessments, nor the American attempt to secure redress, is calculated to solve the difficult tax problems presented by the international ramifications of business.

The proper remedy lies in agreements designed to prevent or at least reduce double taxation of business incomes. Such an agreement was made with France and ratified by Congress in June, 1932. Unfortunately the French Parliament has taken no action on the treaty which permits both countries to make such corrections in the declaration of corporate profits as are necessary to prevent tax evasions.

Last June a general convention to reduce double taxation of business incomes and assure a just allocation of receipts, was drawn up by the fiscal committee of the League of Nations. Congress should be endeavoring to secure adherence to some comprehensive agreement of this sort instead of antagonizing other nations by its habitual method of threatening other countries.

Americans have learned something of the inefficiency of a tariff system which provides for the imposition of penalties to extort trade concessions from other countries. Similarly, resort to tax reprisals as a means of securing redress for grievances real or fancied, is likely to fortify foreign governments in their determination to discriminate against American concerns. Such action creates an atmosphere inconducive to the successful negotiation of agreements providing for a constructive solution of the international problems presented by double taxation.

Restoring Federal Salaries.

The Senate sub-committee which handles the independent offices appropriations has voted for immediate restoration of one-third of the Government pay cut and at least another third from July 1. If this proposal is approved, it will be equivalent to an abandonment of the attempt to adjust Government wages and salaries with reference to changes in living costs. Few persons within or without the Government service indeed appear to regard living-cost data as having much bearing on the outcome of the pay-cut controversy. This indifference is not due to distrust of the statistics but to a realization, conscious or unconscious, that the cut in Government salaries was an economy measure, designed to assist budgetary balance.

Consequently the debate over restoration of Federal pay has come to be viewed chiefly with reference to its effect upon the Government's budgetary position. With a spending program of gigantic proportions launched and all hope of budgetary balance indefinitely deferred, the chief argument in favor of a highly unpopular measure—one which Congress found particularly distasteful—has been destroyed. Added to this main cause for reconsideration of the measure are the arguments advanced last spring emphasizing the inconsistency of reducing Government wages and salaries in face of concerted efforts to raise the wage standards of private industry. As the work of codification has proceeded, these arguments have gained in force, while the interim rise in prices and the expectation of further advances have provided additional support for immediate elimination of salary cuts.

Plain Words From Japan.

Kenkichi Yoshizawa, foreign minister of Japan when that country withdrew from the League of Nations, has issued to his countrymen a solemn warning of an impending naval race with the United States. If the building programs of the two nations are to be dictated by their respective admirals, he tells the Japanese House of Peers, the naval conference scheduled for next year will be foredoomed to failure and a rupture, "even if war is averted," would be inevitable.

These plain words, following the approval given by the House to our $500,000,000 "Naval Replacement Bill," would seem to call for an equally frank appraisal of the situation from this side of the Pacific. In spite of its magnitude—it authorizes the greatest peace-time navy in our national history—the so-called Vinson Bill received little or no serious scrutiny during its swift passage by the House of Representatives. The Senate, which has not yet entirely succumbed to the practice of voting first and thinking afterward, might profitably be somewhat more deliberate in this very serious matter. For what Mr. Yoshizawa suggests, in effect, is that we should meet the liberal elements in his country halfway.

From one viewpoint Congress is only fulfilling its simple duty in passing the euphemistically titled "Naval Replacement Bill." That bill is only an enabling act, granting an authorization to build up the navy, within present treaty limits, to the extent which the Administration deems desirable. Responsibility for the conduct of our foreign relations rests in the hands of the Executive, which presumably examined the problem with the utmost care before asking from Congress powers which it is not obligated to employ. None the less, Mr. Yoshizawa's reference to the enthusiasms of professional big-navy advocates is well taken. We, as well as Japan and Great Britain, have those who are more concerned with the technical efficiency and size of the fleets than with the international dangers involved in rival building programs. After all, the statesmanship involved is not the technician's business.

The Administration may plan to proceed with a maximum of caution and a minimum of sense in carrying out its naval and military programs. Certainly no one is more pledged than the President to a policy of leadership in international peace. Yet in questions of national defense, as in those of monetary policy, it is unwise to put complete and unquestioning faith in the hands of a few technicians. There are certain vital considerations which the technician, on his own, is likely to overlook. That is the point which Mr. Yoshizawa makes. It is a good and constructive point.

World-Wide Recovery.

The movement toward industrial recovery in 1933 extended to almost the entire world. Frequent reports from many countries indicate that the year brought substantial improvements in production and business. A dispatch from Berlin, for example, shows that Germany's index of industrial production for December amounted to 72 per cent of the 1928 output, compared with 62 per cent a year ago. Apparently all the principal countries shared in this advance, except Belgium, where a slight setback is noted from the latest comparative report.

A study by the League of Nations, based on industrial production indices, places Canada in the vanguard of the march toward recovery during 1933. From November, 1932, to November, 1933, the industrial output of that country increased 16 per cent. Next came Sweden, with 15 per cent; Germany, with 14; Japan, with 13; the United States, with 12; Russia and France, with 10, and England, with 2 per cent. These figures represent only a year's gains, and do not indicate the depths to which the depression was carried in any country.

When the indices of industrial production are compared with those of 1928, the United States is found at the bottom of the list. League of Nations figures give us an index number of 66 for last November (1928 represents 100). Canada and Germany had an index of 71; France, 84; England, 92; Sweden, 95; Japan, 138, and Russia, 237, the last two figures being for October.

There are a number of reasons for this showing. Since Europe encountered hard times first it is natural that recovery should begin there. Europe never attained the heights of prosperity that were reached in this country. Hence, it is not strange that the margin between the zenith of prosperity and the nadir of depression should be greater here. Still another factor in the relative lag of recovery in the United States is the extensive development of our capital goods industries. Countries that produce chiefly consumers' goods usually do not suffer as much in a depression as countries that specialize in the manufacture of machinery, building materials, &c. Full recovery in the United States is contingent upon resumption of activity in many industries here and abroad that use American capital goods.

It is apparent from the League of Nations' study that the United States is sharing recovery with most other countries. But there is no evidence in world statistics of phenomenal advancement here. With all our elaborate machinery of recovery, our magic formulas and our unprecedented spending of Government funds, the United States has not kept pace with Canada, where the government is content to follow more or less orthodox economic paths.

A single glance at the reflex movement of the world toward better times tends to emphasize the fact that there is no royal road to recovery.

Housing In Washington.

Numerous deficiencies in housing within the District of Columbia are brought to light by the report of the Public Utilities Commission. It finds an excess of high-rental dwellings and an acute need for living quarters for families of moderate means. The rental survey has not yet been completed, but the investigators have "already uncovered many cases of overcrowding and bad living conditions among the lower two-thirds of the population."

In discussing this major problem the commission says:

> Since the war the housing problem in the District of Columbia has not been one of total supply, but of the distribution of supply. * * * The facts show that while the supply of better-class houses and houses occupied by the better-paid workers has increased by at least 50 per cent, the supply of houses for the lower-paid workers has been negligible. It might be said that there are more better-class houses than are required, but there is certainly a shortage of small houses carrying rents which the lower-paid workers and middle classes can afford.

Shortly after the war Congress recognized an emergency in housing here and passed a law to regulate rents. That measure expired in 1925. Apparently Congress expected the shortage of moderately priced dwellings to be corrected by future construction. But the Public Utilities Commission finds that "the construction which has taken place during the post-war period has afforded practically no relief to the greater part of the population."

More than 70 per cent of the families living in Washington have incomes of less than $2,000. If these families spend 25 per cent of their income for shelter—an amount considered excessive by most authorities—their rent can not exceed $42.50 per month. "In the apartments constructed in recent years," says the commission's report, "not more than a single room and bath can be obtained for such a rental." Yet the commission believes that smaller units—three-room apartments with bath, all properly designed, substantially constructed, with modern conveniences—could be rented at a profit for $20 per month.

A number of recommendations designed to protect home owners and tenants are contained in the report. Legislation on most of these subjects is already before Congress. But the commission apparently has not yet worked out a solution for the larger problem of supplying adequate and sanitary quarters for the lower-income groups. Perhaps it anticipates that mere statement of its findings will be sufficient to change the policy of leaving many apartments vacant while high rentals are maintained. If not, more drastic action may be necessary.

The rent problem has become particularly acute since Federal salaries have been reduced. Taking the country as a whole, rents have fallen 35 per cent since the first half of 1928, but in Washington the decline has been only 15 per cent. This situation, coupled with the deficiencies pointed out by the Utilities Commission, demands attention from the forward-looking builders and real estate interests of Washington. Positive action on their part might remove any question as to future regulation of rents.

Experimental Art.

Uncle Sam's endeavors to promote art for artists' sake has brought about some peculiar reactions. In fostering this project the intention of the CWA was merely to aid unemployed artists by providing funds for the embellishment of public buildings. Apparently CWA officials didn't realize that they were venturing into the shoals of esthetic criticism.

No doubt the situation in Washington is typical. Sixty artists hired by the CWA to beautify public structures are employing their talents at the Zoo, in Government cafeterias and similar places. When the Public Works of Art project was first undertaken the plan called for decoration of the schools. Officials swelled with pride when they contemplated this signal contribution to artistry in the process of elementary education. But the palettes and brushes of unemployed artists have been conspicuously absent from the schools.

Neither the Board of Education nor the city Commissioners, it appears, are willing to take the responsibility of putting CWA artists at work in the schools. Bare walls may be preferable to the kind of daubing in which some kinds of artists sometimes indulge. Art circles are agog over reports that untrained amateurs and unskilled patronage hunters have obtained jobs from the PWAP. If there is any danger that CWA murals may not serve the purpose of embellishment, it is not surprising that officials should prefer to have the CWA try out its art upon the animals at the Zoo first.

Future Employment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A generous Government has expended millions to help feed and clothe the needy. Substituting employment for outright grants, millions were placed on pay rolls, the greater portion of this coming from the National Treasury. With weekly funds coming into millions of homes, and directly affecting 10,000,000 people, a new day had come to America, though it was realized to be only temporary.

Because of a financial necessity, retrenchment is now the program. Its suddenness is a keen disappointment to the millions who had found heart and hope in the experience of the weekly pay envelope once more. Congress alone can save this early retrenchment. But Congress knows that a vote to extend the program of this emergency work at Government expense means the raising of more revenue—a vast sum of it. The problem on one hand is feeding the multitude; on the other, facing and satisfying the taxpayer. A decision must be reached. The issue can not be ignored.

Private industry has done, and is doing, its part. There is a full measure of cooperation among industrialists, the exceptions being so few they need not be considered. But private industry can not, for some time, at least, absorb millions yet out of work, not to mention other millions who will be seeking employment if present plans for reducing emergency pay rolls are carried out.

That the problem will be solved every optimistic and loyal American believes, and this belief anchors itself in abiding faith in the united efforts of a great people.

But the finding and facing a problem is one thing—its proper solution quite another. Belief and faith alone will not suffice. Action, when once the course is laid out, must be the crystalization and the climax to that belief and that faith.

Unwelcome Home Invasions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I heartily indorse your editorial, "House to House," in a recent issue of The Post? From time immemorial a man's house has been his castle—a woman's home still more so—and invasions thereof are bitterly resented.

This week my house has been entered by a man from the Department of Commerce, who seemed to be wasting time and tax money in asking a lot of unnecessary and impertinent questions about private affairs. If another should come from the Treasury he will not be admitted. The Democrats are in Washington for such brief periods that some foolishness may be due to inexperience, but there are limits! "ANGRY HOUSEWIFE."

Answering Mr. Sharp.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please allow me the space to answer the letter by Herb E. Sharp in The Post of January 20 demanding the President to end the depression right now. Selfishness caused the depression and selfishness will not end it; neither can the President do so without the help and support of the people. I would suggest this: Let everyone who has an abundance to eat and wear thank God for it, when he can help his neighbor who is less fortunate, and cease "yapping" until all the hungry are clothed and fed.

Is it better to pay money out of the Treasury to help millionaires who find a legal loophole in the law to evade their income tax, or take a few billion to feed and clothe the naked and hungry by giving them honorable work that they may not be forced to the humility of begging?

If the rank and file would cease their partisan prejudice and vote for the candidate that would do the most people the most good there would have been very little depression to end. N. BURR BELL.

"Free Garages."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I heartily agree with the recent expressions in The Post of both Socrates and A. D. Dalling in regard to the messy appearance of Washington streets by reason of our surviving village parking customs.

We hear ceaseless complaint and futile discussion of a "traffic problem" for which apparently the only remedy that departmental heads can devise is to destroy more trees, trees being the one thing that redeems the ugliness of our downtown commercial area and make it humanly endurable.

Why does not some official think far enough to have a survey made of just what this problem consists of?

It would be found that the fundamental stupidly lies in the enormous wastefulness of our obsolete individualistic system of private transportation, consisting of five-passenger cars, carrying seldom more than one or two passengers (i.e., operating at about two-fifths capacity), when they operate at all, and 18 hours out of 24, blocking the streets in solid rows of dead storage along the curbs.

In other words, why not make at least a beginning of an intelligent attempt to solve "the traffic problem" by opening up the streets to traffic, instead of using them for free garages?

Congressional Broadcast.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Every editor should read the speech of Hon. T. Allan Goldborough, of Maryland, January 9, 1934 Congressional Record, page 300.

Our President is calling on the people for an aroused public opinion and it is the duty of all good Americans to understand the problems our lawmakers are struggling with and give them our undivided support, if we can conscientiously do so.

Our people will be able to create public opinion quicker when the speeches of our lawmakers are broadcast from the halls of Congress, and there must be a public demand for same before it can be done, unless our President takes the bull by the horns and places a Government broadcasting station in the Capital. Most of us understand and know as little of what is going on in Washington as if it was located in China.

Place the pros and cons before the people and they have the sense to decide.

Commending The Post.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to congratulate you on the new Washington Post. Under the New Deal New York has become one of "the provinces." Every day reminds us that economics used to be called "political economy" and that the emphasis is now again on the "political." Without disparaging the New York papers, I must admit that none covers the Washington front so completely, so objectively, or so understandingly as your Post. If one wants to know what is going on in the big tent, he has to read it—or talk with someone who does.

Oddly enough, I read the editorial page. Its comment and analysis offer an interpretation which seems to me fair, constructive and forceful. It is resurrecting an American tradition of the days when editorial comment rather than ballyhoo shaped public opinion.

And, as a one-time newspaperman, I even feel entitled to compliment The Post on its type, style and setup. ROBERT WARREN.

Credit and the "New Deal."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with interest the column in your issue of Monday, January 22, by Robert Quillen. Is that supposed to be funny or is he actually serious?

He states that "greater credit means greater business." He also says: "Let the Government underwrite retail business. Grant to every citizen a 'store credit' equal to one-half the worth of his property or one-half of his normal annual earnings." He moreover states that this will result in greater purchasing all down the line, from consumer to manufacturer, with a result of greater production and prosperity.

My criticism should be that credit has never proved to be anything but a detriment to both debtor and creditor excepting where credit is used to purchase a sound, salable asset, or in certain cases of dire emergency where the cause has been entirely out of the control of the debtor.

Such credit for everyone as suggested by Mr. Quillen would be generally taken advantage of by persons who have already exhausted their regular commercial credit. No one else would want or need it. Anyone with a half reputable credit standing in his community can get more credit now than the Government would give under Mr. Quillen's suggested plan. In addition to this factor: Would not such vast extension of individual credit be almost a duplication of one of the principal causes of our present depression? Overbuying on credit—overstocking on credit—overproduction on credit—then finally bankruptcy—we might assume—because of credit.

Praise From a Newspaperman.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am taking this occasion to congratulate The Post on the wonderful improvement I see in it lately. Editorially, it is again the educated man's newspaper; mechanically, it is the best thing anywhere. Its type will not make a blind man of its readers. It is a joy to know that we have again a newspaper edited and managed by journalists, who are competent and qualified men and take an intelligent pride in their work. GUSTAF FISHER.

Suggestions for New Dollar.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: By the act of April 2, 1792, which established the United States Mint, Congress fixed the gold standard for the dollar at 24.75 grains. This was cut in 1837 to 23.22 grains to comport with the 1 to 16 commercial ratio of gold to the silver standard for the dollar. The California gold miners weighed out 24 grains for the dollar in lieu of gold coins.

If there is to be an alteration in the gold standard, Congress should make a choice between 24 and 20 grains to produce a regular factor to serve the exact and facile conversion of gold bars into dollars. The question today is not one of gold coinage, but of a standard for the dollar conversion of gold bullion.

To round out 23.22 to 24 grains would be quite in order, but the zealots in Congress who want to take off 11.22 grains from the dollar standard would protest against adding 0.78 of a grain to the standard. The alternative proposal for a dollar standard of 20 grains would give 100 grains for $5, which could be called the American pound and would give 1 grain for 5 cents, which could be called the American franc.

At 20 grains, the new dollar would be 86.132 cents of the present gold dollar, and the half eagle would be about 88.49 cents of the present gold standard for the pound sterling.

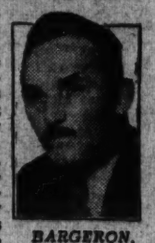
Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

ONE of the amazing aspects of our revolution, and one that, so far as I know, has not been commented upon, is that it has been effected without overthrow of the churches. I imagine this is something that will interest our historians and, for that matter, future revolutionists. Heretofore, overthrow of the churches has seemed to be one of the first essentials of a successful revolution. They were overthrown in Russia when the Communists came in. Mussolini showed an utter disregard for the church when he marched into Rome. The new deal in Mexico first suppressed the church.



BARGERON.

Without going into the many reasons why the church has usually been an obstacle to revolutions one is, I suppose, that it stands for order, and a revolution is anything but orderly. Ours has been effected without bloodshed, but it would not be correct to say no disorder has attended it. The taking away of people's gold is a very disorderly thing, one of the most disorderly things that our Government has ever done. And the present attitude toward bankers and, in fact, everybody outside the New Deal, is quite disorderly.

• • • •

But instead of our revolutionists having moved first against the churches they have from the first had the churches with them. Generally speaking, the clergy has been in the vanguard and not ministering to the doubts of men, either, but urging them on to the fight.

One frequently reads of some church indorsing the way the Administration is leading us. Not long ago a group of foreign missionaries called upon Mr. Roosevelt on the matter of foreign missions and told him parenthetically that they liked his NRA very much. It was not that they were experts on the NRA or knew anything about it but their approval reflected their mood toward the revolution generally.

• • • •

It is no secret around here that the Administration looks upon Father Coughlin as one of its greatest assets. No other Administration has had quite such an aid. The Republicans always played the churches for all they were worth, even to the point of having certain clergymen pray for Mr. Hoover's reelection in the last campaign. No single wearer of the cloth, however, has been quite as valuable to a political party as the Detroit priest.

He is a rabble rouser of no mean import. He is so good, indeed, that upon his recent visit to Washington members of Congress and Senators vied with one another to have their pictures taken with him. Even the highly individualistic Senator Couzens grinned all over himself when the photographers caught him with Father Coughlan. His radio audience has been estimated as high as 30,000,000 and his fan mail is said to fill many a bag.

• • • •

The Administration embraced him almost immediately he arrived at the White House and got through viewing the inaugural parade. Since then there seems to have been a perfect understanding between the two. Whenever the Administration is in trouble it has only to call Father Coughlan by telephone and everything is o. k.

One of his most notable achievements for the Administration was his figurative knocking down of Al Smith after the latter's famous "baloney" speech. That had the White House worried, because Al has a following and that was a most effective speech he made.

What better to do, some one thought, than to sick Father Coughlan on Al! And that is what was done.

It makes no difference that to close followers of things Father Coughlan came out a bad second. You see, there are not many close followers of things.

The End of All.

Wandering through the art galleries of Europe, one of the most familiar subjects, chosen by the great painters is the Last Judgment. The final Judgment Day was as great an inspiration to art as it was to evangelists.

Now, although the Everlasting Bonfire is no longer taken seriously by most religious leaders, the conception of the end of the world is still a fruitful subject for astronomical speculation and for the imagination of the novelist. Some astronomers have told us the sun is cooling off; others have suggested there was going to be a final crash.

The best story I ever read on this theme was written by Nym Crinkle, a famous American journalist and author of the eighties. His story is called The End of All. I first read it in a volume of tales in 1891—and although I forgot the author's name, I continued to remember the horrible march of annihilation from West to East. There was the rushing of a mighty wind, so steady in its fury that while a woman orator was addressing the city crowds, her long hair blew out in a right angle. Trains from the West were crowded with frenzied passengers, all fleeing from the wrath to come. It became impossible to get any news west of the Mississippi. "Chicago was cut off at 4 o'clock." The whole story was printed in the Boston Sunday Herald in 1889, and later appeared in a book.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall.

Three Voracious Readers.

Offhand, you would be hard put to name three gentlemen so varied in temper and yet so marked by a common denominator as those books lie before me today. It is the life-long habit of reading, and that only, which binds a brave, old Englishman, who loved wine and good literature until he was long past 80, a man born in St. Louis who has lived in London the last 20 years cultivating one of the most questioning minds known to our time, and a man born in London who once sailed to Africa in a dory, was shipwrecked in Patagonia and lived with wild Indians; became a teacher of fine arts in Texas, a boilermaker's helper, the manager of an Ohio railroad, and now lives in the Ozarks.

I should very much like to have known what the late George Edward Bateman Saintsbury thought of the adage—"The good die young." Certainly he would have turned aside the query with a genial and modest word. But if, ever there was a man whose life tossed that sad dictum out of the window, it was Saintsbury. The wonder is not that he could write in 1927 of "one or two conversations I had with James Russell Lowell in the eighties"—longevity is a marvelous, indiscriminating commodity. The wonder is that thus writing at the age of 82, he still held the staunchness of spirit and freshness of vision which had distinguished him all his life. If you would search recent years for a good and gallant gentleman, you do not have to go further than George Saintsbury.

"Prefaces and Essays" (Macmillan, $3.40) is a collection of Saintsbury's work covering a span of 48 years. In it are his prefaces to editions of Swift, Fielding, Smollett, Sterne, Jane Austen and Peacock, and essays on Donne, Poe, Longfellow and a number of others. Some were written while he was professor of literature at the University, most while he was a book reviewer—a vocation he practiced between 1882 and 1895 and to which he returned indefatigably during his last decade. (If you would have a memento of Saintsbury's graciousness at 75, read his charming letter to Mr. Norman Douglas which you will find in the Modern Library edition of "South Wind.") But no matter at what stage in his life these pages were written, they are all brilliantly full of the author's kindly humor, tolerance, and what, for lack of a better term, we call human wisdom.

There is space for but one sample. In the Fielding essay (1893) he writes: "There are two moods in which the motto is 'Carpe Diem'—one a mood of simply childish hurry; the other one where behind the enjoyment of the moment lurks, and in which the enjoyment of the moment is not a little heightened by that vast ironic consciousness of the before and after." If that expression be "dated," then it is only because, unfortunately, a round soundness appears incongruous to our times.

• • • •

I must confess at once, in writing of Thomas Stearns Eliot, that he rouses me, in his own phrase, to "something like antipathy." For I feel it true, although his supporters will bring tons of theories in his defense, that he has had no small hand in dilapidating the idea of "round soundness" mentioned above. No one has split more hairs than he in a desire to find stability, no one has run more doggedly over the landscape in a search for "home," and few indeed have less assurance to offer when you catch up with him.

He has expressed despair in his poems sufficiently well to gain him a lasting, if very minor, niche. His critical work in Dryden, Dante, Donne and others has been acute and able. Yet when I come to the man in his essential facing of himself and hence of the world, I find an uncomfortable barrenness. Where every line of Saintsbury implied a self-respecting and courageous solution of life, T. S. Eliot, in my by no means solitary opinion, suggests a tedious and bloodless quibbling. But I have perhaps too much exposed my prejudice.

At least, then, every idolater of Mr. Eliot should read his latest volume, "The Use of Poetry" (Harvard University Press, $2). It contains the lectures which he delivered at Harvard last winter from the Charles Eliot Norton chair of poetry. Beginning with the Elizabethan critics, Mr. Eliot traces the interaction of poetry and criticism in the ages of Dryden and Johnson, Wordsworth and Coleridge, Shelley and Keats, Matthew Arnold, and Mr. Eliot himself. He attempts to find what poetry is and what use it has in the world. He lingers long over distinguishing such terms as "fancy," "imagination" and "intellect."

And yet, though I read faithfully every word in the book, I can not tell you his answer to any one of these questions. I can not find any other conclusion than a kind of throwing up of hands and crying: "How complex, variable, relative and unascertainable it all is!" He whittled everything down into a pile of shavings. Often entertaining as the process was, for Mr. Eliot is very adept at cutting into the arguments of other people, that sort of endless questioning and counterquestioning smacks to me of sophomorics. For I surely do not need to point out that a man never gets anywhere until he makes some assumptions, lives with them and stands by them, and demonstrates in the end that out of assumptions themselves, questionable as they may be in theory, he has formed a good, round life.

I regret that I am caught so near the foot of this column with so interesting a book as Charles J. Finger's "After the Great Companions" (Dutton, $3), the record of a life-time's reading of an unacademic and adventurous man. The softness of his style is a bit depressing, his characterization of our time as "The Age of Literary Appreciation" is to say the least unhistorical, but beyond that the book is wholly delightful. For 50 years he has read two books a week of English literature, and the result, in the best word I can find, "flabbergasts" me.

"The Great Companions" is Whitman's phrase for "the swift, majestic men, the greatest women," and these Mr. Finger has read and revelled in. Easily and informally he chats about them all, tells what he liked, what it taught him. In the end, as his principle, he states: "Knowing the excellent, any boy worth his salt will refuse the fustian." I can well believe that after his wide and honest ranging from Dick Turpin to "Arabia Deserta" and "The Golden Bough"

The Once Over

By H. J. Phillips.

Favorable Factors for the Year. (Continued.)

1. All over the country, high and low, one of the most beneficial factors in the Nation's history is the falling off in the number of people asking, "How much is there in it for me?" and the big increase in the number asking, "Would it be honest?"

2. Even the moving-picture corporations are showing slight indications of subscribing to the notion that a man who buys stock in a company should get a reasonable break.

3. People are reading the mail-order catalogues again.

4. There is a rather general feeling that even cheaper money wouldn't be as terrible for the country as cheaper ethics.

5. You have to hire detectives to find a run on a bank.

6. The RFC has loaned all its money and is going to have a helluva time getting much more.

7. Business is picking up all over the world and even in Cuba there's a pronounced switch from uniforms to working clothes.

8. A year ago when a men had a chill he thought it was the big jitters. Today when he has the big jitters he dismisses them as a chill.

9. President Roosevelt is still lending an ear to the boy wonders and Phi Beta Kappa, but he is still calling his own signals and is free to run or punt.

10. Uncle Sam has been forced to take so many medicines that he now thinks capsules are candy and can't be frightened by the doctor any more.

11. All we had a year ago was bitter memories, befuddlement and half of 1 per cent. We enter 1934 with boundless faith, abundant signs of improvement, real beer and a cocktail with dinner.

12. Things look pretty good, unless the old astigmatism is back.

13. The country is no longer confusing the best minds with the best hair cuts.

14. There has been a drop of 16 per cent in head-wagging, tut-tutting and poo-poohing over the November high.

15. Even the most easily frightened industrialists are beginning to see that government dictatorship can be successfully endured if they keep their heavy underwear on, take a hot stimulant now and then and stop looking under the bed.

16. The bankruptcy courts are no longer giving continuous performances and the number of honest failures is up 3 per cent over the boom year figures.

• • • •

17. It has become generally recognized that it is more important to feed men than to oil machinery.

18. There is less talk about the Forgotten Man and more talk about the Forgotten Woman.

Fort Myer Addition Asked in Congress

Enlargement of the Fort Myer military reservation through purchase of a small tract of land from Joseph D. McDonnell, of Arlington County, is proposed in a bill introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Smith (Democrat), Virginia.

The bill asks that not more than $90,000 be appropriated for the purchase. The land is on the west side of the reservation.

Robbers Baffled By Bank Vault

Brandywine Equipment Taken, However.

Apparently disappointed because they were unable to break through a wall into the vault of the Brandywine (Md.) Bank, robbers early yesterday took a typewriter, adding machine and clock from the bank lobby.

The robbery was discovered by Alvin Minehardt, garage owner, who made an early trip to the bank to deposit money. He called police.

Holes were drilled around the front door lock and the locked pried open. Inside, the wall about the vault was battered, as if with a crowbar.

House of Delegates Bars Measure Laid to Liquor Monopoly.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Jan. 31.—National Distillers, Inc., was charged with liquor profiteering today in the General Assembly.

At the same time administration leaders were reported to have agreed on a compromise under which only about half of approximately $1,000,000 in new taxes proposed by Gov. Peery would be voted.

A new understanding by the Senate privileges and elections committee on Congressional redistricting also shifted attention from House indignation about whisky.

Boschen Assails Distillers.

The committee decided to favorably report a bill calling for a revamped Eighth District, as predicted by The Washington Post. The plan proposed transfer to the Eighth of Goochland County from the Third District; Fluvanna from the Tenth and Albemarle, Madison and Green Counties and the City of Charlottesville from the Seventh. The Eighth would retain Arlington, Culpeper, Fairfax, Fauquier, King George, Loudon, Louisa, Orange, Prince William and Stafford Counties and the City of Alexandria.

Delegate Albert O. Boschen, Richmond, led the attack against National Distillers as the House considered an amendment offered by Delegate Charles W. Crowder, Richmond, to permit drug stores to buy whisky direct from manufacturers instead of from the State control board, as provided by the dispensary bill.

The amendment was rejected.

Details Liquor Profits.

Virtually all existing American liquor stocks, Boschen contended, are controlled by National Distillers. He charged the corporation had been receiving $7 a quart for a whisky which cost 50 cents a gallon. He argued National Distillers backed the Crowder amendment.

Delegate Wilbur C. Hall, Leesburg, urged rejection of the Crowder proposal on the ground that it would defeat the cardinal principle of his measure—a State liquor monopoly.

The House killed, by 73 to 18, an amendment by Delegate Vivian Page, Norfolk, intended to permit whisky sales in hotels and restaurants.

Bay Rum Forbidden.

Delegate George W. Harring, Woodbridge, won House approval, by 48 to 47, of an amendment to give political subdivisions 65 per cent of liquor profits. The issue was raised unexpectedly, and it was generally believed House leaders later would put through a motion to reconsider the action and give all liquor revenue to the State.

An unsuccessful fight to grant the right of court appeal to dealers in light wine and beer whose licenses were revoked was waged by Delegate Ralph Daughton, Norfolk.

The House passed, by 75 to 1, an amendment by Delegate John Q. Rhodes, Louisa, which would permit political subdivisions to call local option whisky elections immediately after the bill becomes effective, instead of waiting six months. Another amendment approved would permit such elections in all towns with a population of more than 1,000. The minimum formerly was 1,500. Delegate E. B. English, Richmond, obtained passage of an amendment to forbid sale of bay rum except on a prescription.

$650,000 in Park Funds Unclaimed

Purcell Urges Landowners to Send Requests.

Richmond, Jan. 31 (AP).—State Treasurer John M. Purcell reported today that approximately $650,000 of the $1,500,000 fund he is holding for landowners in the Shenandoah National Park area is still unclaimed.

About two dozen landowners in Madison and Greene Counties sent in requisitions today for approximately $50,000, and this money will go out tomorrow, Mr. Purcell said.

Eight counties are involved in the distribution.

Chamber Names New Committee

Hagerstown Groups to Seek More Industries.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 31 (Spl.). Avoiding criticism of the past that too many manufacturers are on the new industries committee of the chamber, thus discouraging many new industries from locating here, directors of the local chamber of commerce are naming a new industries committee, whose members will be interested personally in bringing new industries here.

E. Aldine Lakin, president of a lumber business here, is chairman; Wallace Caum, who operates a large hotel, and C. Merritt Campbell, president of a leather company, are members.

Abe Martin, local retailer, has been elected a director of the chamber, succeeding Elmer Carl, who resigned.

Powers Assert Armed Reich To Aid Peace

Germany voluntarily renounces any claim to possess 'offensive' weapons and limits herself to normal 'defensive' armament required for the army with which she would be provided in the convention."

Unwilling to Disarm.

Then the white paper said Hitler "advances this proposition on the assumption that heavily armed states are not prepared to abandon, under the convention, any portion of their existing weapons."

Rome, Jan. 31 (AP).—Expressing doubt that the heavily armed powers wished to disarm or could do so, the Italian Government announced today it favors negotiations on a status quo basis for the former allied powers and rearmament for Germany.

Such a course would be coupled with efforts to obtain a general agreement for abolishing chemical warfare and prohibiting bombardments of the civil population.

The proposals were made in an official communique for world distribution. It was issued after Premier Mussolini had studied a British declaration on arms.

The United States was not mentioned by name in the memorandum, but it was understood reliably to be included.

The memorandum said the Italian Government was convinced that Germany could not be thinking of "warlike moves outside her borders."

Ends Two-Year Study.

Two years of disarmament discussions, the trend diplomatic negotiations have taken, and recent declarations by government leaders have led Italy, the communique added, "to have well-founded doubts that the armed powers wish or can reach an accord for measures of disarmament that will permit a solution to the present situation.

The right of equality of Germany and other states disarmed by peace treaties has been "solemnly recognized," the announcement continued.

France would have ample security, even in the face of German rearmament, the document contended, with the limitations or prohibitions regarding chemical warfare, civil bombardments, military expenses, and land forces.

Western Maryland Ends Shop System

Railroad to Operate Plants Under Own Direction.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 31 (Spl.).—The contract shop system, under which the Western Maryland Railroad system has operated for about 12 years, ended tonight, when the railroad company took back its shops to be operated under its own supervision.

The Dickson Construction & Repair Co., which took over all shop work of the railroad following a strike of shopmen, has been notified that the firm's contract terminated tonight.

Between 700 and 800 men, employed in the shops and on track work here; about 1,400 on the Hagerstown division between Baltimore and Cumberland, and about 2,500 on the entire system, will be affected by the change. The wage scale will not be changed and the employes, who have been without pass privileges during that period, will have passes restored. No change in personnel is expected, railroad officials stated.

5 Pct. Federal Pay Return Now Voted notice they also would force a vote on the floor.

Action of the subcommittee did not meet with the thorough approval of Government workers. Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, said:

"Return of 10 per cent is pleasant, but it is not adequate, will not meet the situation in the future and does not correct the incorrect principles involved in the economy law."

"The subcommittee's action in reducing the pay cut is appreciated, but it does not go far enough," E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, said.

'Only Have One Bad Habit—Robbing Banks,' Dillinger Says

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Chicago, Jan. 31.—John Dillinger, Indiana desperado, said in an interview 2,000 feet above Illinois that his "only bad habit is robbing banks."

"I don't smoke much and I drink hardly any," he said, while being returned to Indiana by plane to face murder and bank robbery charges.

"My only bad habit, I guess," Dillinger said, "is robbing banks." He smiled and shrugged when "murder" was mentioned. "I'll plead not guilty to that," he said.

No Beginner's Luck.

Dillinger, handcuffed and wrapped in blankets, sat huddled between four officers armed with machine guns.

"I robbed my first bank about nine years ago," Dillinger said. "I was 21 years old then. But I didn't have beginner's luck. I got caught the first time I tried it. I've robbed several banks since then, though."

Dillinger said that he would have lived up to his word that he would never have been taken alive "if I'd had half a chance," referring to his arrest in Tucson, Ariz., last week.

The Indiana desperado said he had intended to remain in Tucson for about five weeks "and raise a lot of hell. I had lots of money and I could do just about anything I wanted to," he continued.

"We planned to stay in Arizona until the weather cooled off." Dillinger smiled when it was suggested that instead it got a little hotter. "Too hot," he said.

Dillinger insisted he turned bank robber "because I had too much time on my hands."

Time No Object.

"I got a lot of time for doing it, too," Dillinger joked. "They gave me a nice, long sentence."

Dillinger, shortly before landing at Chicago talked of his father and brother in Indianapolis. "I guess they ain't very proud of me," he said.

Hijackers Kill Driver On Broadway Corner

New York, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—Christian Hans, 34, a truck driver, was killed at a Broadway corner today when he resisted the attempted hijacking of his truck, parked in the shadow of Tombs Prison.

Hans drove to a cigar store and parked as crowds of workers hurried along Broadway. Three men ordered him to abandon the machine, loaded with $20,000 worth of cigarets. Hans refused and one of the gunmen fired.

Hall went to sleep in a cabin used as a clubhouse by a group of Singers Glen men and awoke to find that his hands and feet were frozen. He made his way to the home of Roy Whetzel nearby and was rushed to the hospital.

Other members of the week-end party left the cabin before the record-breaking cold wave hit this section.

Cleveland Banker, 45, Shoots Self to Death

Cleveland, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—Ralph K. Johnson, 45, former auditor for the failed Union Trust Co., shot himself to death today in a washroom of the bank. Bank officials said they knew of no reason for the suicide, declaring Johnson was financially able to retire.

Florida Governor Calls For Report on Lynching

All Alaska, in Paris Gowns Or Boots, Honors Roosevelt

Seattle, Jan. 31 (AP).—By dogsled and airplane, Alaskans mushed to the most cosmopolitan birthday party the Northland has ever seen—a series of balls honoring President Roosevelt.

Suave and civilized Caucasians, imported Paris gowns, impeccable black and white evening attire, refrigerated flowers taken North from Seattle by boat and airplane—these graced the more elaborate parties.

Stocky Indians and Esquimos, fur-trimmed parkas and Mukluks, miners with violent red and green plaid shirts, raucous phonographs—these characterized the simpler functions at crossroad taverns.

President Roosevelt's policies virtually doubled the price of gold and silver, boomed industry and commerce all over the territory and he lent a sympathetic ear to the problems of the Far North, pulling Alaska out of the doldrums, so he is one of the few "outsiders" to become an Alaskan hero.

All over the territory dances were organized. Fairly simple ones at places such as Iditarod, Chitina, Tanana Crossing, Little Eldorado, Unalaklik and Talkeetna. Big swanky ones at Juneau, Ketchikan, Cordova, Fairbanks and so on. Fairbanks sold so many tickets to the ball that they had to hire two halls.

Election Today Settles Race For Virginia U. Class Offices

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.). Candidates for graduating class offices at the University of Virginia are putting on the most spirited campaign in years. There are four contestants for most of the positions. The election will be held tomorow.

The nominees for class president are George Cameron, of Petersburg, Va.; Stonewall Jackson Doswell, jr., of Staunton, Va.; Lemuel E. Mayo, jr., of Portsmouth, Va., and Frank H. Wisner, jr., of Laurel, Miss.

There are three nominees for vice president: Charles W. Gasque, jr., of Savannah, Ga.; Horace S. Marshall, of New York, who has been named upon two student tickets; and James R. Shanklin, of Gary, W. Va.

Other nominees are: For secretary: George Minor Coles, of Charlottesville, Va.; Seddon Cabell Nelson, of Winchester, Va.; Fred S. Palmer, of Middletown, Md., and Benjamin W. Smith, of Baltimore, Md. For treasurer: Ray E. Burger, of Covington, Va.; James A. Grady, of Pueblo, Colo.; William H. Harris, jr., of Richmond, Va., and Charles K. Woltz, of Salem, Va. For class historian: Ben B. Dulaney, of Washington, D. C., nominated on two tickets; John R. Fitzhugh, jr., of Vicksburg, Miss., and William A. Hobbs, of Norfolk, Va.

The University of Virginia has no "class system." Men elected each year to head the body of outgoing graduates become permanent officers unless others are chosen at reunions of alumni.

Knife Foreseen For $1,000,000 School Aid Plan

Changes in Several Parts of Peery's Program Expected.

Richmond, Jan. 31 (AP).—There were persistent reports in the General Assembly today that the administration's $1,000,000 tax program for schools will be scaled down.

Officially they were neither confirmed nor denied, but spokesmen close to Gov. Peery said "some modification may be expected."

It was reported that several features of the tax program would be amended. One would leave the income tax exemptions as at present but with an increase in the rate. Another would strike from the bill the section making dividends of Virginia corporations taxable as income.

Gov. Peery, who this morning said he was "standing on our program," this afternoon said he had no comment to make.

Plan to Continue Deficit.

With some exceptions most of the assemblymen commenting on the school tax program said they hoped a way could be found to give schools necessary funds without increasing taxation.

Believing this could be done by continuing the State's $2,000,000 deficit for the next biennium, Senator Aubrey G. Weaver, a leader of the antitax group, today introduced a bill amending the 1932 appropriation act to make continuance of the deficit legal.

The bill, and a resolution by Mr. Weaver, to prohibit any taxes for discharging the deficit were referred to the Senate finance committee.

Meanwhile, the Senate privileges and elections committee again reported an amended Holt Congressional redistricting bill. This would change Appomattox and Buckingham Counties from the Seventh District into the Fourth, along with Cumberland.

Goochland, Fluvanna Shifted.

Other amendments today took Goochland out of the Third District, and Fluvanna out of the Seventh, and put them in the Eighth District.

The House bill putting all State penal institutions under one general superintendent was favorably reported out of committee this afternoon.

While the House spent the day on amendments to the liquor control bill, the Senate passed the first of the economy committee's bills—providing for a change in public school text books at the end of seven-year periods, instead of five-year periods under the present law.

The upper House passed also the Garrett bills amending the act for refunding highway certificates of indebtedness, and the Ferguson bill amending the code relating to the issuance of new State bonds and certificates for bonds and certificates lost or destroyed.

Green Glasses on the Cow in Coal Buying

Beware of the Higher Cost of the Lower Price . . .

GREEN GLASSES may make shavings look like grass—but they don't put fuel value into such fodder for the cow. "Bargain price" coal may look rosy to you—but its rosy glow in your furnace will burn out faster and turn cheap tons into expensive heat.

Coal advertised to Washington users as Hard coal at "bargain prices" is frequently not the real Pennsylvania Anthracite.

This clean-burning, long-burning, full-burning, steady-burning standard for fuel value is always plainly designated by name—Pennsylvania Anthracite—if the real hard coal is being advertised to you.

Don't let confusing advertisements put green glasses on you. The reliable dealer is a safer guide than price.

Hagerstown Ball Realizes $1,000; Virginia Parties Well-Attended.

Baltimore, Jan. 31 (AP).—Reports began to roll in today from 38 Roosevelt birthday parties throughout the State as local officials took account of the revenue of the 15 affairs held here last night to raise funds for the Warm Springs (Ga.) Foundation.

With many of them crowded beyond capacity, the Baltimore parties provided entertainment for some 20,000 to 25,000 persons, according to unofficial estimates. The parties in the State, for the most part, were well attended.

Gov. Albert C. Ritchie and Mayor Howard W. Jackson made separate tours of the city's gatherings.

Reports from many of the Maryland parties were:

Hagerstown—More than $1,000 was realized by the Roosevelt ball, which 600 persons attended.

Baltimore—Only one ship in the harbor honored the President on his birthday. That was the British ship City of Athens, flying its bunting, pennants and flags.

Frederick—David C. Winebrenner 3d, Secretary of State of Maryland, addressed the gathering, attended by 800 persons. More than $300 was taken in.

Cambridge—A 30-pound cake, 32 candles, was cut.

Annapolis—About 1,000 persons attended the celebration in the State capital.

Dance in Fredericksburg.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.).—Several hundred persons gathered in the Princess Anne Hotel here last night to honor the President on his fifty-second birthday. A special dance by Leon Canelis and Miss Betty Abbey and sale of a President's birthday cake were included on the program.

Fort Assails Slum As Breeding Crime

Montgomery Republican Women Hear Leader.

A plea for better housing conditions as a method of crime prevention was made by former Judge William E. Fort, special assistant to the Attorney General, at the quarterly meeting of the Montgomery County Federation of Republican Clubs.

"So long as we have slums, there will be racketeering," he said. He said American citizens must reform themselves before a change can come.

Describing a recent visit to the Federal Prison at Lewisburg, Pa., Judge Fort said that an effort was being made to make better men of the prisoners. He declared "the rudiments that underline the structure of citizenship must be taught these prisoners to make them better citizens."

The corresponding secretary was instructed to write to the county commissioners and restate the resolution adopted at the last meeting, asking for more adequate protection of the county land records.

Elaborate Plans Await Arrival of "Moulin Rouge" Caravan in Town Tomorrow

Many Notables Of the Screen Will Be Feted

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

With the Presidential birthday benefits in theaters, ballrooms and other gathering places successfully written into the record, the Capital now looks forward to the arrival tomorrow of the members of the entourage which, when it departs this city, will become the "Moulin Rouge Caravan," a motor-car cavalcade scheduled to traverse the continent by easy stages.

Among the stars who are definitely pledged to put in an appearance tomorrw—to take part in the midnight preview of Constance Bennett's latest starring vehicle "Moulin Rouge," in the Palace Theater tomorrow night, to precede that professional engagement by participation in an elaborate floor show at the Shoreham and, on Friday, to be guests at a luncheon and reception in the private dining room of the Senate Restaurant at the Capitol—are included Antonio Moreno, Mary Carlisle, Roscoe Ates, Doris Hill, Jack Mulhall, Ben Turpin, Creighton Hale, Anne Q. Nilsson, Nancy Dunbar, the former Mrs. Max Baer and John Hundley.

This assemblage of stellar personalities also will make an appearance on the stage at Loew's Palace Friday night at the 9 o'clock performance.

Group of Model Models.

In addition to these prominent representatives of Hollywood acting forces and the bevy of beautiful dancing girls, recruited from the stunning ensembles of "Moulin Rouge," it is now reported that the "Caravan" also will number among its personnel, girls whose striking features and ravishing figures have drawn the admiration of millions of Americans who read magazines, billboards and newspaper advertisements. These are a group of noted models who have posed for some of the most familiar figures known to the contemporary prints.

As important members of this coterie of beauties may be mentioned Jeanett de Lys, who has posed for many of the Chesterfield cigarette ads; Ruth Clark, known as the Life-Saver girl; Bee Woodward, whose face has adorned many Blondex ads; Claire McQuillen, the Palmolive girl, and Mardee Hoff, who has become almost a trade mark for Lux.

At the luncheon on the Senate side of the Capitol, for which invitations are out for 1 o'clock Friday, Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, of California, will act as chairman of the reception committee to honor the representatives of one of the most important industries of his State.

A Doubtful Junket.

With regard to tomorrow night's midnight performance at the Palace, it may be repeated that tickets are now on sale at all of the Loew theaters and at about 20 leading hotel and neighborhood drug stores. Despite the unusual character of the added attraction provided by the "Moulin Rouge Caravan," the management stresses the fact that the regular scale of admissions will be maintained and that no seats will be reserved.

There are rumors drifting about in the circumambient ether to the effect that the local dramatic desks are embarking upon a safari to Baltimore on Thursday to join the members of "Caravan" and accompany them into the Capital by train. Having executed this minor coup in the case of the "Forty-second Street Special" last Inauguration Day, we wouldn't be too sure!

It's an exciting adventure for all concerned, but no tonic for the nervous system, although this train will not be harnessed up with all the gadgets that complicated life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness aboard the "Special."

In addition to Artist Johnny Pierotti's sister, Bobbie Deva, it now develops that two other members of the Four Rhythm Queens, with Alex Hyde and his Musical Darlings on the stage at Loew's Fox, are not unknown to Washington theatergoers. Dorothy Probey and Peggy Little, half of the Four Queens, it seems, were residents of Washington and members of the "Foxettes" when that permanent local dancing group was organized at the Fox back in 1928. The Foxettes, having outlived the house policy of the Fox, finally were transferred to Brooklyn and Dorothy and Peggy went along. Miss Little's parents are still Washington residents and daily attendants at the Fox to watch their daughter dance. Miss Probey's family recently moved to another city.

Favorites Return.

When Louisa M. Alcott's "And Old-Fashioned Girl" comes to the National Theater this Saturday morning, as a production of the Children's Theater of New York, it will be welcomed not alone for its story but also for the players it brings back to the Capital.

The part of the gracious old Grandmother Shaw will be portrayed by Viola Roache, seen here earlier in the season as Mrs. Pepper in "The Five Little Peppers." Miss Roache has been with the Children's Theater for the past three years. She is an English actress, whose career dates back to Beerbohm Tree's Shakespearean productions in His Majesty's Theater in London. Before joining the Children's Theater, she played with Ina Claire in "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney," with Ann Harding and Lowell Sherman in "The Woman Disputed" and in "The Bachelor Father." For a time she was a member of the Chicago Civic Shakespeare Society, with Fritz Leiber, Helen Mencken and William Faversham.

Other Familiar Figures.

Other members of the "Five Little Peppers" cast to return with "An Old-Fashioned Girl" are Storrs Haynes, the Doctor in the earlier play and Mr. Shaw in this; Robert Josselyn, the Ben Pepper of this year and the Laurie in last winter's "Little Women," the Huck in "Huckleberry Finn" and Gepetto in "Pinochio."

Dorothy Major and Townsend Muddell were prominent in the cast of "Cinderella," the December play. Last year, Miss Major had the stellar role in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm." Mr. Muddell has a long list of musical comedies to his credit—"No, No, Nanette," "Queen High," "Little Old New York." He also played in "Journey's End," "Death Takes a Holiday" and "Broken Dishes."

Sally Washington, the "Old-Fashioned Girl," is a newcomer to Washington audiences. Hitherto she has played with Dorothy Gish and Henry Hull and with the Stuart Walker Repertory Company.

The closest approach that the Gayety Theater has made this season to the old-time standards of thoroughly organized circuit burlesque is to be found in this week's presentation of "The Laughland Girls." The featured feminine specialists knock the tired business men right out of their down-front pews, the comedians are hilariously funny in a lowbrow, roughneck, vulgar sort of way and the chorus seems not to have been recruited from among the rheumatic remnants of an old folks' home. But in weather like this you'd think they'd freeze!

A Belligerent Blonde.

The screen seems in imminent danger of losing one of its most charming blondes. Sizzling across the continent on an A. P. wire comes word that Gloria Stuart is threatening to turn newspaper woman and go to Shanghai, China, as an escape from what she deems unfair treatment by the producing company to which she is under contract.

"I've been on this lot for two years, and I've always done what I was told to do," she said. "I haven't been temperamental, I've worked for not much salary, I've played in one picture after another, and they now give me star-rating on the lot.

"But what does it bring me? I go away on a well-earned vacation and when I come back I find they've given the best parts in the new pictures to two players they had to borrow from outside.

"They not only do that—but what's more, Paramount, RKO and Fox want to borrow me for good parts and Universal won't lend me.

"I don't care about money and I'm not going to stand for it," she declared. "Before I was an actress I was secretary to Joseph A. Coughlin, who was managing editor of a magazine in San Francisco and Carmel. He now has a paper in Shanghai, and he wrote me not long ago saying he could use me on the paper. I'm giving the studio one week in which to make up its mind about me.

"And then if I'm not satisfied I'm going to leave!"

Catching the spirit of the occasion, quite, Peter Borras, proprietor of the Madrillon Restaurant, added a surprise touch to the midnight birthday benefit performance at Loew's Fox Theater last night for the President's Warm Springs Foundation, of which the audience could not possibly have been apprised, unless through its combined olfactory nerve. Realizing the physical sacrifices sometimes entailed by enterprises of this kind, Mine Host Borras prepared steaming coffee, sandwiches of all kinds, a variety of pastries and other delicate comestibles and served them backstage to the performers, musicians, artisans and all others who had a hand in making the benefit a complete success. Not only did the thoughtful and philanthropic Senor Borras donate these lifesaving viands, but he personally donned his apron and helped serve the collation, thus proving that he not only can "take it" but can "dish it out" as well!

Tst! Tst! Tst!

Woman's Slaying Motive a Mystery

Mrs. Lanier, Near Death, Accused in Tragedy.

Norfolk, Jan. 31 (AP).—Authorities today are seeking a motive for the slaying of Miss Mary Floride Stephens and the alleged attempt at suicide by Mrs. Nora Lanier, whom officers charged with the killing of Miss Stephens.

A note indicated Mrs. Lanier had made careful plans to take her own life, police say.

Miss Stephens was shot in the yard of her dairy farm near Princess Anne Court House Sunday night. Witnesses, attracted by the shot, said they ran to the scene in time to see Mrs. Lanier shoot herself. She has little chance to recover.

Mexican Beads Prove Fetching Novelty in Store

By Ruth Anne Davis.

The manager of an F street shop beat a nervous tattoo on his desk. The midwinter sales were virtually over. Spring stock was still in the offing and yet somehow he had to provide the store with "that old sales appeal." One o'clock, 2 o'clock, hour after hour passed, but no inspiration. At length toward closing time the "hero" entered. He was neither tall nor handsome but he carried a case in his hand which yielded a wealth of color and novelty.

He opened it and the eyes of the manager lighted with satisfaction as he surveyed the fascinating Mexican jewelry. There were beads—red, orange, blue, green, yellow—strung into necklaces, earrings, bracelets and brooches. Some of them were small wooden beads, others like large wooden marbles. A great many china were cut in odd shapes and dyed the brilliant caballero colors.

The manager, recognizing a good thing when he saw it, straightaway put in his order. Now the jewelry has arrived and is arranged in a striking display. The colors catch the eye and the fantastic combinations dazzle.

Jewelry of this type may be highly recommended to add colorful touch to somber winter frocks. It may be worn by old and young alike providing the size is chosen in careful consideration of the figure. Very plump or very thin persons should never wear conspicuously large beads. But the lucky mediums may do pretty much as they please.

Although whole sets of the jewelry may be bought together, in a great many cases a person does well to wear either one piece, or else combine earrings and brooch, beads and bracelet, or vice versa. However, there are types which can "get away" with the whole ensemble, but the ordinary young woman should proceed into the realms of extremes with moderation.

The pendulum seems to have swung back 50 years to the time of knitting, crocheting, plaiting of rag rugs, and assiduous needle point labors. Whereas with our grandmothers such industry was a dictate of necessity, we're prone to regard it as a pleasurable pastime.

The knitting fad has spread so rapidly that the stores have had some difficulty in supplying the demands. The buyer of one notions department says her knitting bags are scarcely in before they're out. Lately she's gotten in some which we think are the most attractive so far.

They're made of coarsely woven cords in mingled shades of red, brown and green. Heavy rope handles are fastened on to two firm top placks. They're conservative and unusual, and roomy enough to be of real use.

At the rate cocktail pipes are appearing in the Washington shops we can not doubt but they'll soon be a usual sight. The newest to arrive in town are considerably less expensive than the first arrivals. They come in two styles, one with the bowl designed to hold the cigarette upright like a flagpole, the other with a slightly larger bowl to hold the cigarette tobacco. Either of these are available in jade, coral, red, green, white and powder blue.

So far the women's pipes to appear on the market have been dainty feminine affairs. But there are already rumors of corncobs.

The newest and most novel beverage gadget is known as the "go-where-you-go-shaker top." Instead of packing in the complete shaker we can carry this adaptable top in our handbag or coat pocket. It's designed to fit over top of any size glass and change it into a convenient cocktail shaker. Or it may be used for milkshakes or other beverages. It's made of nontarnishable silver plate.

Sport bracelets which will have an undeniable appeal to the sportswoman have just arrived in an F street gift shop. The horsebit braclets which were so popular this fall have evolved into these less awkward link combinations. They may be bought in silver and gold finish, with onyx, jade, red, brown and blue touches.

An F street shop is "selling out" some of the lovely light velvet dressing robes that went so well this winter and are featuring the new negligees and lounging pajamas "just in."

These are decided contrasts to the robes. The lounging pajamas have bright Roman striped tops and solid bottoms. The negligees are merely trimmed in bands of solid material. Vivid blues, greens, reds, purples and golds riot in lengthwise stripes.

Other negligees have exaggerated flower patterns, in numerous high colors placed conspicuously against a black background. There's small chance of anyone wearing either the gay negligee or pajamas and keeping any degree of the blues.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4205, Extension 106, for further information. Or write, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope.

Brides From States Still in Demand in Alaska, Resident of Territory, Now in Capital, Affirms

Woman Usually Gets Good Bargain There, Too, Mrs. Loman Says.

Alaska is still the happy hunting ground for spinsters. This assurance is brought to Washington's large unmarried feminine population by Mrs. Carl Loman, who has spent 18 summers in Uncle Sam's icy province.

Mr. Loman is the owner of large reindeer herds in Alaska and he and Mrs. Loman usually go there in the summer. They are spending the winter in Washington. Mrs. Loman is the daughter of former Representative Andrew J. Volstead.

"Yes, the girl who has never had any masculine attention can take a new lease on life when she goes to Alaska," said Mrs. Loman yesterday. "The percentage of women who go to Alaska to teach school or do other work and who marry and stay there is very high.

Alaskans "Good Catches."

"The girl who marries in Alaska usually gets a good bargain, too. The Alaskan is what may be called a 'diamond in the rough.' His education may not have been along the usual conventional lines, but he is well read and has traveled extensively."

Mrs. Loman asserted that most of the white residents of Alaska were well-bred and well-informed about what was going on in the world.

"One seldom finds a more attractive social life nor more elaborate social entertainment than is offered in Nome, a town of 1,000 population," she said. "Many inhabitants of Alaska leave during the winter and return for the summer months. Those returning have been to widely varying places and have much to talk about. All get together, swap yarns and forget all about the cold weather. No one is ever bored because there is so much interesting conversation. But if talk should fail, there is the old standby—bridge."

Eskimos "Admirable."

The Eskimos were depicted by Mrs. Loman as simple and admirable people.

"They have many customs that seem strange to us," she said, "but when we consider the handicaps they have worked under we must admit they are remarkable. They are peaceful and gentle. True, they are not very ambitious, and they regard with amazement the white man who is always looking for more work to do."

Much conflict and misunderstanding concerning Eskimo life has resulted from the missionaries of many different sects who were sent to Alaska, Mrs. Loman pointed out.

"Before the advent of the white man, religion was a very simple matter to the Eskimo," she said. "There were good spirits and bad spirits. The good spirits never bothered anyone, so they were not noticed. But concessions had to be made to the bad spirits.

Odd Marital Customs.

"The missionaries do not agree on certain points themselves, so naturally were not consistent in their teachings. As a result, the poor Eskimo is frequently bewildered about the white man's religion."

According to the standards of this country the Eskimos have unusual morals, Mrs. Loman explained. While they marry, they do not consider it necessary to be faithful as husbands or wives, as Eskimo women may be married to one man and have several children by other men. The husband does not mind this situation, according to Mrs. Loman. Any child is to be cared for and treated with respect no matter to whom it belongs.

"The Eskimos are real Communists," she said. "They share their work and any profits that may result. If one Eskimo kills a reindeer all the others help eat it. And so, while there is no organized charity, there is also no real suffering."

This fashionable Alaska Eskimo costume, known as a parka, was designed and made by hand by Eskimo women.

Take Pride in Clothes.

Eskimos also have their fashions and like to appear in beautifully wrought costumes, Mrs. Loman said. The women are expert seamstresses especially in the art of making the parkas of reindeer skin. These garments are artistic as well as warm. They are also waterproof. Some have exquisite trimming.

The Eskimos take great pride in their parkas, having some that they wear only on Sunday and others, plainer, for every day. When going into a town an Eskimo wears his ordinary parka, carrying the better one. Outside the town, he changes into his better costume.

Alaska is looking for a revival of activity in the near future and another rush of emigration. And this, of course, will mean more matrimonial opportunity for the unattached maidens and spinsters of "the States."

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

White Spots on the Skin.

There is a disease or disorder of the skin which is characterized by a loss of pigment in patches. Some know it as vitiligo and others as leudcoderma. It is not easy to decide whether or not it is a skin disease, since the membrance is free from pain and itching, is not sore or ulcerated, and seems entirely normal except that it is free from pigment. However, a piebald face is not exactly attractive and, because many are affected, there is a wide demand for a cure for it.

For years we have told people who wrote asking for help that the best we could suggest was to stain the spots with walnut juice or some other dye. Those who developed some skill succeeded in keeping the spots of nearly the same hue as that of the surrounding skin. The careless and indifferent were not successful as skin painters, and they continued to complain.

We were accustomed to write inquirers that we knew of no cure. Gradually physicians have been approaching a cure. Several have been tried out and some of the reports from them are excellent. Many cures are reported. Among those that have been tried are muriatic acid internally, injection of acridine, dyes, exposure to ultraviolet light, intravenous injection of cacodylate of sodium, applying an alcoholic solution of oil of bergamot to the patch, followed by exposure to ultra-violet; exposure of the spots to sunlight, injection into the veins of a solution of gold sodium thiosulphate, and a combination of such injection with painting the spots with oil of bergamot and exposure of them to sunlight or to ultra-violet light, and painting the spots with cologne and exposing them to sunlight or ultra-violet light.

Dr. M. H. Cohen reports a most gratifying success from this combination of treatments: Painting the spots daily with a 10 per cent alcoholic solution of oil of bergamot, exposing them to ultra-violet from a carbon arclight for three to five minutes twice weekly, and injection intravenously of a solution of gold sodium thiosulphate once a week.

The improvement was very noticeable in two weeks. The cure was complete after 14 weeks of treatment.

The simplest of the several methods of treatment is to apply cologne and follow that by exposure to light. That is easy and inexpensive, and should be safe and harmless. As it will be made use of, the chances are that not a great many will be cured by it.

Bit of Crisp White on One's Somber Dresses Proves Effective Late Season Psychology

By Amos Parrish.

New York, Jan. 31.—It's good psychology right about now to have a bit of crisp white show at your neck when you throw open your winter coat. It takes away from that jaded look that's apt to occur toward the end of winter. Freshens up the skin and brightens the eyes. Makes you look as though you were just starting, instead of ending, the season.

Let a crisp organdie bow pop out at the world as you open your coat. Try the up-and-standing look of organdie or net ruching.

Let ruffled Val lace or embroidered batiste cascade from your throat. Or splash pique or fish-net crocheted mesh pertly down your bosom.

It's good for you. And good for those who look at you.

Pure White.

It must be sharp, pure white to have the best psychological effect. And it can be little or large . . . depending on what looks best on you.

For a little, bows, collars and cuffs, and simple vestees do the trick neatly. For a little more, jabots, Ascot scarfs and bibs.

These white lingerie touches are at their psychological best when they're on dark dresses. Particularly black or navy. But they are also used on new prints, chiefly on the new monotone patterns which combine a dark or strong color with white . . . such as navy, brown, black, red or green with white.

Samples of Prints.

We've put a sample of one of these new monotone prints on our new leaflet which tells the print story for this spring. There are samples and descriptions of five other smart print types, too.

If you'd like this leaflet to look over before you buy a new print dress (or the material for making one) we'll send it to you . . . just as soon as we receive the coupon below with the requested inclosures.

Gallows of Chance

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

The Story Thus Far.

Convicted of murder, Cecil Brandt is to be hanged. Sir Humphrey Rossiter, England's young home secretary, can, if he so desires, intercede for him. He refuses to do so. The evening before the execution—while motoring to London in a hired car, following a visit to Lord Keynsham and his sister, Lady Louise, in Norfolk County—he is seized by four masked men, rushed to a mysterious house, placed on a gallows. "Promise," says the spokesman, "to grant Brandt a reprieve—or die!"

Sir Humphrey will not promise. Informed, however, that Brandt's wife has new evidence to present, he finally does so. Released, he meets Katherine Brandt, hears her story, promises to grant a reprieve. The woman leaves. Sir Humphrey collapses. Hours later he recovers consciousness. Cecil Brandt has been hanged!

Scotland Yard goes to work. Whereupon Katherine Brandt and Sir Humphrey both disappear! • • • In Norfolk County, Inspectors Smithers and Simpson search in vain for the house of mystery and the chauffeur who drove the hired car.

"Well, I don't know," she meditated. "You'll have to get your dinner out. The old man don't come home now, but if two meals—breakfast and supper—and your room for six bob a day——"

"They're mine," her nephew interrupted brusquely. "Show me the room and I'll wash my hands and be down after that bacon I smell."

"I can't stop to show you anything," his aunt declared. "You march up the stairs and the first door on your left—that's yours."

Ernest Pank did as directed. The little room was almost bare of furniture except for the bed, but spotlessly neat and clean. He looked around it with keen eyes, then descended to the street, picked out his personal bag from the truck and handed half a crown to the barrow man.

"Go and get your breakfast," he told the latter. "You can come back here in an hour."

The man touched his hat and bundled off. Ernest Pank ascended once more to his temporary apartment, opened his bag, washed his face and hands and listened. A sleepy-looking girl with big, dark eyes and a pleasantly provocative mouth looked in at the door.

"Hello!" she exclaimed. "Are you a new lodger?"

"You may call me that if you want to," was the prompt reply. "I'm your cousin Ernest and I'm going to kiss you."

"What put that into your head?" the girl laughed, submitting willingly enough to the embrace. "Quite the gentleman, aren't you? I thought you were a policeman up in London."

"I was," he assented, "but since I won in the Calcutta Sweep I've gone into the heel business. I have come down this way to sell a few, and I'm going to board here instead of in a hotel."

"That's all right," she said. "Glad to have you, Cousin Ernest. Come along down to breakfast . . ."

The four sat around the family table and exchanged a little family news before the exodus began. First of all the girl, with a yawn, pushed her chair back, got up and straightened her hat before the mirror. From the door she looked back.

"What time do you finish work, Ernest?" she inquired.

Gallant Answer.

"Same time as you," he answered gallantly. "I'll fetch you from the side door."

"'Six-thirty then. So long, mummie and dad."

"And as good-looking as her mother," the young man agreed. "You still at the same shop, too, uncle?"

The latter nodded.

"Foreman now," he confided. "Get my dinner at the mess. Saves me something, that does. It's a long way off down here even when the buses ain't full. See you tonight, Ern."

"Rather," Pank replied, "We'll go round to some of the old places."

Ernest was left alone with his aunt. She refused to allow him to help with the dishes and pointed to the easy chair. He sat there, smoking a cigarette.

"What do you do with that nice room when I'm not here?" he asked.

"Let it when we can."

"What was your last tenant?"

"Inquisitive, ain't you? If you take my advice, Ernie, you won't go questioning your uncle about him either. I'm not quite sure why or wherefore myself, but the old man is a bit touchy on the subject. Nice young chap he was, too, and paid good money."

Off to See Customers.

"I ain't curious about him," Ernest Pank observed. "I am only too glad he cleared out before I came along. I'll go and get my stock book and start out to see a few customers."

He ascended the stairs, rather pleased to find that they squeaked noticeably, left his door an inch or two ajar, moved his bag onto the bed and commenced a remorseless search of the apartment. After 20 minutes he acknowledged failure. There was not a sign of a relic of any sort of a previous tenant. Reluctantly he put the room out of his mind. Between the chauffeur's neatness and his aunt's cleanly habits there was not even a scrap of paper left behind. He went downstairs, donned his mackintosh, bade farewell to his aunt and called his man.

"George," he said, "this is not the sort of weather I fancy for tramping about the streets."

"There's no one but a fool would do it unless he had to," was the gloomy reply.

"Well, I don't have to. I have had two good weeks. You follow me up to the Flying Fox."

The man touched his hat. He had not been impressed by his client's choice of a lodging, but the half-crown had been good enough. He wheeled his truck into the yard of the Flying Fox and waited. Presently Ernest Pank appeared, followed by the bootmaker with whom he had been doing a little business.

"Get the cases under shelter," the former directed. "Now don't open your mouth too wide. How much for the day whether we go out or not?"

Plans to Work Alone.

"Eight shillings, including the barrow," was the prompt reply.

"Here's half a sovereign, and you can go home and keep warm," his temporary employer enjoined. "I can do all the business I want without carting any stuff around."

The man grinned.

"You're the sort I likes to work for. What time tomorrow morning?"

"Here at 9:30."

Soon after opening hours Ernest Pank made his way to the Cat and Chickens, the small public house where he had heard that one suggestive sentence from the one person who gave point to it. He took an easy chair by the fire in the parlor, stood a drink to his host, sent the young woman out for the morning papers and made himself comfortable. Not a customer came in, however. At 1 o'clock he reluctantly made his way to a small restaurant, and the afternoon he spent asleep on his bed, rather to his aunt's disapproval. A Treasury note, however, retrieved the situation.

"No need to brag about it, aunt," he observed, as he accepted a cup of tea a little later on, "but I have not been doing so badly. Got a good bonus when they turned me out of the force. They couldn't stop that because it was coming to me, and I am on a soft thing with these heels."

"I always said that you were a smart lad, Ernest," his aunt commented.

Ernest Pank smiled.

Amy Arrives.

At 6:30 promptly Amy appeared in the back street behind the important millinery shop where she spent her days. The rain had ceased and Ernest, in his well-brushed blue serge suit and well-selected linen, was a very much smarter person than the young man who had descended from the clouds in a mackintosh. She took his arm proudly.

"Let's go for a little walk," he suggested.

"I'd love to," she assented.

"What about a glass of wine?"

"I don't often go into those places," she hesitated. "But with you," she tugged at his arm, "with you it would be all right."

They made their way to the Cat and Chickens. More disappointment. The man who had been the central figure in all Pank's thoughts lately again failed to make his appearance. Pank, however, who was now welcomed as an old customer, ordered a glass of port for his companion, sherry for himself, whisky for his host, and made himself comfortable in the large easy chair. Amy sat on the arm and took his hand.

"You may kiss me if you like, Ernest," she invited, as soon as the landlord had disappeared.

"Of course, I like," he answered, accepting the invitation. "Aren't I glad I came and looked uncle and aunt up this morning? Jolly nice room I've got, too."

A Nervous Chauffeur.

"Hope you'll stay a long time," she said, cuddling up a little closer.

"If I don't I shall come again," he assured her. "How long did the last lodger stay?"

"Him—oh, only a fortnight."

"Chauffeur, wasn't he?"

The girl nodded.

"Queer chap," she went on. "I didn't like him. He seemed so nervous all the time; afraid to open his mouth for fear something would drop out. First of all, he spoke as though he was someone's chauffeur in the neighborhood, and then we found out that he had got a job at Preston & Sons, the big garage. He went away all in a hurry. I always thought there was something rather queer about it. Not that he didn't pay—he paid all right."

"Bowhill. Tom Bowhill. Oh!" she exclaimed suddenly, sitting up with a start.

"What's the matter?"

"Mummie and Dad both made me swear I'd never tell any one who asked what his name was," she confided. "They said that he was on a special job, that there might be inquiries about him and that no one was to ever answer them. He paid them, I believe, a lot of money for their promise. Now I've done it! But it doesn't matter telling you, does it, Ernest?"

"Of course it doesn't," he scoffed. "You can tell me anything. Tell me the name of your steady if you like."

"I haven't got one," she assured him confidentially. "There's lots of chaps always around, but there's no one I fancy. The millinery is very genteel, you know, and I can't stand these rough fellows after it. Kiss me again."

Obeys Enthusiastically.

He obeyed with enthusiasm. She rested her head upon his shoulder.

"Talking about that lodger—I've forgot already what you said his name was—" Pank remarked, "where did he come from or, rather, where did he go to when he left?"

She looked up at him with a mild wonder in her eyes.

"Why are you so curious about him?"

"I'm not really," he answered, "but, if you want to know, the only chap I have met from Norwich for a long time said something about your walking out with a lodger."

"Stuff and nonsense!" the girl exclaimed indignantly. "I take a walk sometimes with one or two young gentlemen friends, but I never went out with him—not a yard."

"And I hear," Ernest Pank persisted, "that he left Norwich to go up to London to arrange to get married."

"He didn't go to London at all, not to stay at any rate," Amy contradicted hotly. "He went back to his own home and job somewhere Fakenham way."

"Well, I beg pardon, I'm sure," Pank said earnestly. "I don't care a fig what his name was or where he went to. I was just a bit jealous. Don't let's mention his name again."

Sworn Word Broken.

"Don't let's," the girl acquiesced. "I have broken my swear word—two or three times over if it comes to that," she added, with a little laugh. "But I know it doesn't matter with you, does it? You're in the family, aren't you, Ern?"

"Am I, dear?"

She sighed.

"I'm afraid you're too used to talking to young ladies. You have a kind of glib way."

"No one else ever told me so," he assured her.

Just then a bulky-looking man, in a gray suit with a patch of white paint near the waistline, opened the door and lounged into the room.

The New Tweed Suits Authentically Tell You Spring Is On the Way

By JANE STUART.

It's going to be a grand tweed season. Never have they been so soft and heathery looking, so richly colored . . . and still they remain unpretentious and classically smart! Hazy monotones, dreamy as mist settling over Scotch moors, checks and more checks . . . small checks, shepherd checks, field checks . . . overplaids and mannish materials . . . surely that's an intriguing variety for you. In addition to their interesting surfaces, they have a more beautiful array of colors than you've ever seen. In the green family alone there is mint green, Persian green, lime green. There are rose, gold, blues and tans.

Enough for the materials . . . take a look at the new silhouette. The predominant feature is a forward sweep that makes the wearers look as if they were caught in a windstorm. Coats lie flat against the back, with fullness in front, particularly from waist to hem. Collars hug close to the back of the neck, and often stand up straight over the collar-bone, as though turned up against a stiff breeze. You'll note a new, alluring sleeve, not quite so full at the shoulder, with some fullness concentrated below the elbow . . . faintly suggestive of bishop sleeves. Even the swaggers have a straighter line, and many of the coats have a boxy feeling. This restless new silhouette is youthful and appealing. Just try on one of the new suits—and you'll go out looking for spring.

Judge O'Toole Prefers to Hear Damage Cases

Pioneer Woman Member of Bench Recalls How Choice Was Fought.

Regarded now as a fixture in Washington's judiciary system, Judge Mary O'Toole remembers when the very mention of her name as a prospective member of the bench made usually dignified men pace the floor and use undignified language.

"They didn't have anything against me, personally; they just thought that women were not fitted for the position," she laughed yesterday in her office in the Municipal Court Building as she recalled the turbulent days that preceded her appointment 14 years ago. At that time there were only three women judges in the United States.

Bench Not Her Ambition.

"I really didn't want to be a judge," she continued. "I had been practicing law in Washington for eight years and had a large number of clients. When I was first approached about the judgeship I said that I wasn't interested. I didn't think I stood a ghost of a chance of getting the appointment, anyway. But some of the prominent women of the city kept urging me until, almost before I knew it, I was involved in the struggle for the position. After I got into the fight, why naturally I wanted to win."

Things looked extremely hopeless for a while, admitted Judge O'Toole; so hopeless that she finally went to E. C. Graham, then an officer of the Republican District committee, and asked him what he thought of her chances for success. Mr. Graham told her he thought she would get the appointment.

Tribute to Opponent.

"If you had asked me two weeks ago I would have said exactly the opposite," Mr. Graham told her. He then explained that in those two weeks death had removed the man who had been most bitterly opposed to a woman on the bench. That man was Judge Ashley Gould, of the District Supreme Court.

"I've been told that he paced up and down his front porch when he heard I was being considered for the appointment," said Judge O'Toole. "He thought the position of judge would lose much of its dignity and prestige if women were permitted to hold it. When I heard that, I didn't know whether to be glad or sorry that I had gone to his funeral," she added, with an Irish twinkle in her eyes. "He was a fine man, though, and a great judge, even if he did oppose my appointment."

Prefers Damage Suits.

Most of the cases that are decided by Judge O'Toole are damage suits. One month out of every five she presides over the landlord and tenant court.

"All of us municipal judges have to take a turn at it and we all regard it as a disagreeable chore."

Civil suits are preferred by this woman judge. She recently spent three weeks on the juvenile court bench and, when Judge Kathryn Sellers was away from the juvenile court for almost a year because of ill health, Judge O'Toole took her place. But she was glad to get back to her damage suits. She finds them more stimulating because, through them, she determines points of law, while in the juvenile court she dealt with people who had broken the law. The depression has increased the number of cases brought before her, as many suits are filed in attempts to collect debts.

New Gowns Use Real Butterflies

Chemical Treatment Saves Brilliant Sheen of Natural Colors.

Paris, Jan. 31 (AP).—Shimmering South American butterflies were displayed today as the newest feature in costume adornment for spring. The showings are crammed with novelties, indicating that accessories are to be important in the coming mode.

The butterflies, which the designers claim were imported from the Andes regions, have been given chemical treatment so they can be worn without destroying their sheen.

One big, irridescent, blue-green beauty hovered on the neckline of a black lace evening gown and a small white butterfly was poised on the collar of a black crepe day dress.

Silk afternoon frocks, designed on soft feminine lines, are being shown. They have natural waistlines, skirts 10 inches from the ground, long or bracelet length sleeves and modified low necklines—contrasting with the higher necklines seen in sports frocks.

Woman Voters Plan New Department

The growing scope of Government has started a movement in the National League of Women Voters for the creation within it of a new department of Government of economic welfare. After three months of consultation between the National chairman of representatives of 39 States and the District, the proposal has been submitted to the membership for discussion prior to submission to the next National convention.

This proposal emphasizes the position of the league, now traditional, in respect to the protection of women in industry, and also includes new subjects relating to the health, safety and economic security of the woman worker.

In my present feeble cure.

She Calls It Luck

MISS DOROTHEA LEWIS, Washington author of "Second Act Curtain," which will be produced next week by the Columbia Players.

Girl Playwright Pens New Show Of Columbians

Young Newspaper Woman Is Sure Luck Follows Her Career.

Good luck has been an important factor in the life of Dorothea Lewis, young Washington newspaperwoman, who is the author of the play, "Second Act Curtain," which the Columbia Players will present next week. At least, that is Miss Lewis' story.

Miss Lewis feels that she was fortunate in being born a Washingtonian and having had the opportunity to live in the Capital. She says she got her first newspaper job because she was lucky enough to be playing a small part with the National Theater Players the same week, more than five years ago, that another newspaperwoman was also filling in at the National. They became acquainted, and Miss Lewis discovered that the writer was about to resign her position, whereupon she applied for the job and got it. Now she thinks she is lucky that the Columbia Players are willing to produce her new play.

However, Miss Lewis, who has been a leading lady with the Columbia Players for several seasons, declares that it was not luck that gave her her start in the acting business, but the fact that as a seventh grader she was "the loudest-voiced girl in the room." She appeared in a school play that year, then another the following year, and from there went to Central High School, where she was prominent in dramatics.

It was at Central, also, that Miss Lewis wrote her first plays, "The Scarlet Shawl" and "The Russian Soul," both of them one-act productions. They were produced at Central, and have since been done by the Columbia Players. "Second Act Curtain," which is a thoroughly local play, with its scene laid in the press room of a Government bureau, is the first full-length play that she has attempted.

"Dot," as she is known to newspaper folk, has been a member of the Congressional press galleries for four years.

The Columbia Players will produce her new play Tuesday and Wednesday at Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets. Orris Holland, the Players' director, is in charge.

Jewish Trends To Music Field Are Analyzed

Pittsburgh, Jan. 31 (AP).—A sweeping trend of the Jewish people in America into musical fields is reported in a Nation-wide study by Dr. Keith Sward, psychologist, of the Pennsylvania College for Women.

The cause, he finds, is not superior musical endowment, but lies in an upwelling of social forces under the new civilization of the West.

"Eminent American musicians," he says, "number many more Jews than you would expect from the Jewish ratios in the general population.

Contrasts With Europe.

"Roughly, 50 per cent of the violin-virtuosi, and the maestros and first violinists of American symphony orchestras, are of Jewish origin. One-quarter to one-half of the piano-virtuosi and of all symphonic and amusement instrumentalists are Jewish.

"Ten per cent of American composers are of Jewish extraction."

In sharp contrast stand European orchestras with "an extremely low ratio of Jewish players," despite large size of Jewish populations.

Above all else, in America, the Jewish musician loves the violin and the stringed instruments "are his forte." In 12 foremost American symphony orchestras, Jewish men comprise one-third of the string section; one-half of the violins.

Orchestra Statistics.

In 23 nationally known amusement orchestras 73 per cent of the violin players are Jewish. But in those organizations clarinet, trombone and horn "are strikingly non-Jewish."

"Jewish fondness for the violin has certain social and habitual roots," says the report. "The instrument is inexpensive. It has a religious precedent in the Oriental chassidic styles. The professional demand is greater for this instrument. However established, the Jewish flair for the violin could have perpetuated itself by tradition, i. e., that more Jewish parents expose their children to the violin in the belief that a child may 'have it in him.'"

This investigation was made with the aid of funds granted by the social science research council.

Young Woman "Horse Doctor" Tells Ambition

Eureka, Calif., Jan. 31 (AP).—The theory that animals appreciate kindness more than human beings is the reason Dr. Elizabeth Roberts explained today, she became a veterinarian. She is 26 years' old and attractive.

Known as "Doc" Roberts to the residents of Ferndale, center of Humboldt County's dairy industry, she was the first of her sex to become a licensed veterinarian in California.

"I guess it was heredity and a realization that animals might appreciate my talents more than human beings," said "Doc" Roberts. "My father was a newspaperman whose motto was, 'Be a little different,' and my stepfather has been happy as a veterinarian for 25 years, so you can see my final choice was not so hard to make."

But the choice proved difficult to follow. She arrived at Washington State College at Pullman in the fall of 1929.

She had $150 in cash, a high-school diploma, and four years' experience as a stenographer, a housewife, a bacteriologist's assistant and a diploma from a barber college.

"I enrolled in the school of veterinary medicine, giving up most of my cash," she said with a laugh. "But it wasn't a week before I was on the carpet in the dean of the women's office to be told that I must transfer to home economics or music, because no 'lady' could stay at Washington State and associate only with men students and animals. I got by that argument, but the dean told the truth of being a lady. I didn't really have time to be one."

Cocktail Styles Vary According To Place Worn

New York Display Shows All From "Bronx" to Black "Day After."

By Elenore Kellogg.

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—Cocktail fashions are something one hears a great deal about these days. Actually, a cocktail fashion may be almost anything, as disclosed in a "cocktail hour fashion parade" by a prominent designer.

When dropping into a hotel lounge in the late afternoon, for instance, one wears a smart, simple type of dress that is not so different from what one would wear when dropping into a hotel lounge for tea.

On the other hand, dresses to be worn to cocktail parties in private homes are more formal, and if the gathering is followed by a dinner or theater party, the dress ranges from interesting sophistication to grandeur.

"Day After" Gown Black.

One of these dresses shown was of bluish purple and of the severest simplicity from the hem to the collar line in front. There it bloomed out into a standing, wing-like collar of sequins and the wings went down to the waistline in back to form a striking deep decolletage. The sleeves were long and simple.

For those who go South, spectator sports clothes in summery colors are the ideal costume for a cocktail after a swim or a game of golf. An attractive dress of this type was of plaid silk crepe with blue and green predominating. The dress had a high ruff like collar and short sleeves. It was worn with medium length white gloves and a wide-brimmed blue hat tipped at a sharp angle.

A dress called "The Day After" was of black crepe with a high ruff standing up around the throat and a sort of small ruff standing up around the pocket. A wide red belt was the only note of hope in this sweetly melancholy dress.

Even the Skirt Swirls.

Another dress, called the "Bacardi Cocktail," was of crepe in a soft orange shade with a cowl neckline in front and a low back. The waistline is moulded and the skirt swirls as it reaches the floor and ends in a tiny train.

A "Bronx Cocktail" was of heavy white satin and had a coquetish little cape of ostrich feathers.

One of the best informal cocktail party dresses, incidentally, was seen not on a mannequin but on a social register guest. This garment was a tight-fitting knee-length tunic of dead white rough crepe which came up to a high, unadorned neckline and had slit raglan shoulders. With it were worn a hat, gloves, belt and skirt of black.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest.

Home Life.

The roof is stout against the rain,
The walls shut out the cold,
And through each little window pane
The great world we behold.
Outside the wintry snow comes down
And bitter is the storm,
But safely I come back from town
To cozy rooms and warm.

But there are other storms to fear
And other frosts to dread.
A bitterer cold may enter here
If angry words be said.
And though the walls be stanch and strong
And though the doors be stout,
Were hatred e'er to come along
They could not shut it out.

The walls can keep away the snow,
The roof shut out the rain,
But love must keep the rooms aglow
Or bolted doors are vain.
For home is not of brick and stone,
But happy hearts and minds,
And soon that place is overthrown
Where hate a lodging finds.

The strength of home is in the heart
And not within its walls.
When those who keep it draw apart
The stoutest structure falls.
So let the wind blow cold outside
Against the window panes,
We'll happily at home abide
So long as love remains.

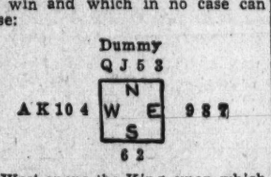
False Carding.

A False Card is the play of a card other than the lowest held by the player when making no attempt to win a trick, or the play of a card higher than necessary when winning, or seeking to win, a trick.

The Declarer has no partner to deceive. He is, therefore, at full liberty to play his cards in such a manner as may be most deceptive to his opponents and thereby permit him to realize the full trick-taking ability of his combined hands. The Declarer is never in doubt as to his own strength and weakness. His opponents are for the most part groping in the dark. For this reason, the Declarer frequently will find it advantageous to false card—that is, for instance, holding Ace-King-Queen of a suit, to play the King or the Ace, rather than the Queen, which is, of course, so far as his opponents are concerned, of equal value. One of the most obvious false cards in such a situation would be to capture an adverse Knave with the King. If cleverly done, this play might cause an adversary to place the other higher honors in the suit in the hands of his partner.

Another example of the false card is the play of a high card upon an adverse lead in an attempt to convince the opponents that only a singleton is held. Ordinarily false carding will not deceive strong opponents. However, when the play can not lose, but stands a chance to win, it should be attempted.

The following is an example of a false card which may have a chance to win and which in no case can lose:

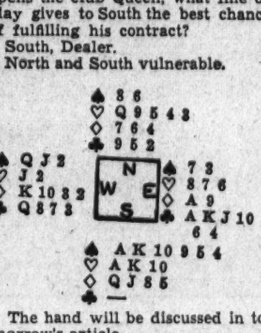


West opens the King, upon which the trey is played from Dummy, and East plays the 7, a card which might be read by West as the beginning of an echo encouraging him to continue the suit. The Declarer, wishing to establish the suit in Dummy, should play the 6, and not the 2. West may decide that his partner probably held only the 7-2 of the suit originally, and is requesting him to continue the suit in order to ruff the third round. Whether the play succeeds or not, nothing has been lost, and it is entirely possible that through the false card, two cards may be established in Dummy upon which discards of losers may later be taken.

Tomorrow's Hand.

If South is playing a contract of four spades, against which West opens the club Queen, what line of play gives to South the best chance of fulfilling his contract?

South, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

What Today Means

"Aquarius."

If February 1 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:35 to 10:35 a. m., from 2:10 to 3:10 p. m. and from 7 to 8 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 4 to 5 p. m. and from 8:30 to 9:30 p. m.

If February 1 is your birthday, you are inclined to be a dreamer. It may be well to bear in mind while day dreams are very pleasant to indulge in and thus momentarily transport you from the troubles of this vale of tears, they can not relieve you of your fixed responsibilities. You can not afford to overindulge in them. Face the daily problems with a practical mind, eliminating fantastic and visionary schemes. On this date be alert, and careful that you do not allow yourself to be involved in any business of a dubious nature. It is advisable to use more judgment in selecting your intimate friends.

The child born on February 1 in its infancy will occasion little or no trouble. When it arrives at school age, its inclination will be to associate with much older children. This undoubtedly shall prove the reason of it having a great deal more self-confidence than the average child of its age. Older children will display a great deal of interest in its welfare, and this will prove of the greatest help throughout its entire school career.

The woman born on February 1 possibly may have to often vigorously object to being called impracticable. If born on February 1, you are incline to see everything through rose-tinted glasses. Cultivate the habit of becoming more analytical. Concentrate more than you do on every detail of anything where good judgment or financial expenditure is involved. It is advisable, when talking with men, to be conservative in your statements, and do not express an opinion, unless you are well informed on the subject under discussion. Men will admire you much more if convinced there is no pretense about you. Do not appear indifferent to the manifestations of love when it is offered.

The man born on February 1 has a lot of poetry in his soul, and too often tries to keep it hidden for fear of being ridiculed. Do not hide your light under a bushel, let it shine so it will help make this world a brighter place. You have many beautiful and lofty thoughts, give expression to them so others can share them.

People born on February 1 possess a marvelous amount of loyalty for family and friends, and will make great sacrifices, if by so doing they can prove their devotion. They believe in the motto, "Love conquers all things," and by applying it to their every-day lives they can expect the reward to which they are justly entitled.

Successful people born on February 1:

David Porter, naval officer.
Thomas Cole, artist.
Edmund Quincy, author.
Victor Herbert, violoncellist and composer.
James A. Herne, actor and playwright.
Jonas G. Clark, philanthropist.

"No Man" Functions Enjoyed By Both, Mme. Djalal Finds

English Wife of Diplomat Says Women of Her Adopted Country Are Divided Into Camps of Moderns and Reactionaries Because of Emergence From Oriental Customs.

Embodying in themselves the highest culture to which the various races and nations of the world have attained, the women of the foreign diplomatic corps in Washington are curiously alike in their simplicity, sympathetic cordiality and democracy of spirit.

This article is the tenth in a series of interviews written for the purpose of making them, and the women of their country, better known to the women of America.

By Elizabeth Young.

In their wholesome enjoyment of one another's society, Persian women have one striking bond in common with American women. They have the same characteristics of being natural and hospitable without much ceremony in their social life.

Such is the observation of the English-born Mme. Djalal, wife of Persia's Minister to this country. For 21 years she has lived the life of a diplomat's wife in many countries. She came to Washington for the first time six months ago.

"In Persia, women often assemble for luncheons and teas to which no men are invited, just as they do in America. It is a custom I have never seen practiced to the same extent in any other country," she remarked.

"Persian women are very artistic, too. They do exquisite things in painting and embroidering. They do not do it in a professional way, of course, because as yet they are not invading the professions to any extent, except in medicine. Women doctors are favored by Persian women, and the past eight years have seen great advances in the study of medicine among them."

National Transition.

She crossed the long, luxuriously furnished room—brilliant with sunlight and splashes of color afforded by hangings and Persian rugs—to bring back a small picture of a Persian woman in native costume. It had been painted by a Persian princess, who never had a painting lesson in her life. Mme. Djalal seemed very proud of it, and justly so, because the play of light and shadow across the painted countenance was a triumph over either photography or brush.

"Women of Persia are now in the chrysalis stage of emergence from Oriental into European customs," said Mme. Djalal. "As a consequence, there are two groups, the moderns and the reactionaries. But there is sympathy and understanding between the groups.

"The oncoming generation goes unveiled, while the older generation clings to the custom of its youth. But in doing so, it does not disapprove of the moderns. Older women do not unveil because, while they comprehend the viewpoint of their daughters, they simply don't care to abandon a custom of a lifetime. It's no longer a principle with them. It's a habit."

Luxury for Persian Women.

Mme. Djalal herself is typically English in appearance. She has blue-gray eyes, a pale clear skin, and lovely golden hair. She was wearing a smart black afternoon dress and a small black cloche.

"Persian women for the most part live lives of luxury, surrounded by many servants, but they are domestic in the sense that they devote themselves almost entirely to family interests. Great thought, time and care are devoted to the rearing and educating of their children. But they enjoy a great deal of social life, too. And their social life is much like that of European or American women of the same class."

Mme. Djalal was married to Ghaffar Khan Djalal, Persia's envoy to this country, at a time when he was First Secretary to the Persian Legation in London. That was 21 years ago. For nine years thereafter they remained in England, and the last 13 years have been divided between Sweden, Norway, Persia, Italy, Egypt and the United States.

Compensation in Travel.

Her first visit to Persia was ten years ago, when she stayed for 18 months. Her second opportunity to cultivate an increasingly interested acquaintanceship with the women of her adopted country came four years later, in 1918, when she went to the capital, Teheran, for a residence of nearly four years.

Mme. Djalal finds in travel full compensation for the responsibility and routine which makes up the diplomat's life. And had she not married quite so young, there is strong likelihood she might have become a painter. She has transcendent feeling for line and color.

"From childhood, I felt destined to travel. And I had a terrible longing to abandon everything and study the technique of painting," she said. She did not travel until after her marriage.

Then she found, in Italy, her favorite country. Egypt she loves. The sunsets of Sweden left indelibly beautiful pictures in her mind. And in Washington she has found a sense of peaceful living combined with picturesque surroundings encountered nowhere else in the world. She has an ambition to know California.

Bagdad Disappointing.

"For one who detested the study of geography in school days, I have found the world an amazingly interesting and beautiful place," she laughed. "I confess to a certain disappointment in Bagdad. Like others, I had expected to find it an Arabian Nights' sort of place. I was disillusioned.

"Mesopotamia fulfills one's expectations. The deserts, the people in their native dress, have all the glamour of fiction. And in upper Egypt, too—in Luxor, for instance—one sees, side by side with modern progress, scenes which have endured the past 2,000 years. One even notes the same facial characters in some of the people as are carved and painted on the walls of the tomb of Tutankhamen.

"The beauty of color and line in the architecture and painting in Italy is something which satisfies the soul. We lived near the Villa Borghese, and I used to go there just to look at the marvelous things. One's eyes revel in the beauty of antiquities one sees in the most unexpected places."

Hold Head High Is Best Remedy Of Double Chin

Modern Experts Now Agree Grandmother's Beauty Rules Were Best.

Old fashioned beauty rules are the best after all.

Authorities on beauty agree that grandmother was pretty well up on the art of preserving her feminine charm. They are recommending to women the world over the simple exercises and practices which were used 50 years ago to control sagging chin muscles.

Once the face begins to drop a double chin is perilously near. And double chin is synonym for "middle age!" But, say the experts, there's no need for it. Keep the head high. Practice walking with a book balanced on the head. Remember not to "let the nose get there first!"

Double Chins at 20.

It seems particularly paradoxical for young women of 20 to have double chins. And yet that's what hundreds complain of.

Admitted, the natural tendency of muscles is to take the downward path. But not at 20. At that tender age a double chin clearly indicates that the posture of the head is anything but right. Bending the head forward over desk, typewriter, sewing or reading for hours at a stretch can't help chin beauty a bit.

But holding the head high will!

Abdomen in. Head up. Chest up. Chin in. And head high!

Pillows Are Perilous.

And dispense with the pillow. Beauty experts are emphatic about this. They say there's nothing worse than a high mound of pillows to bring about a premature double chin.

One very excellent exercise which has come down from the "days when" is good for young and old alike: Drop the head forward as far as possible. Now slowly stretch back, back until the head rests between shoulder blades. Repeat 10 times and as you do the exercise feel the stretching. Following the exercise apply a hot towel to the neck and massage upward and outward.

Remember to stop the chin when it first begins! Or better yet, follow the simple rules that will keep it away altogether!

BEAUTY and PROGRESS
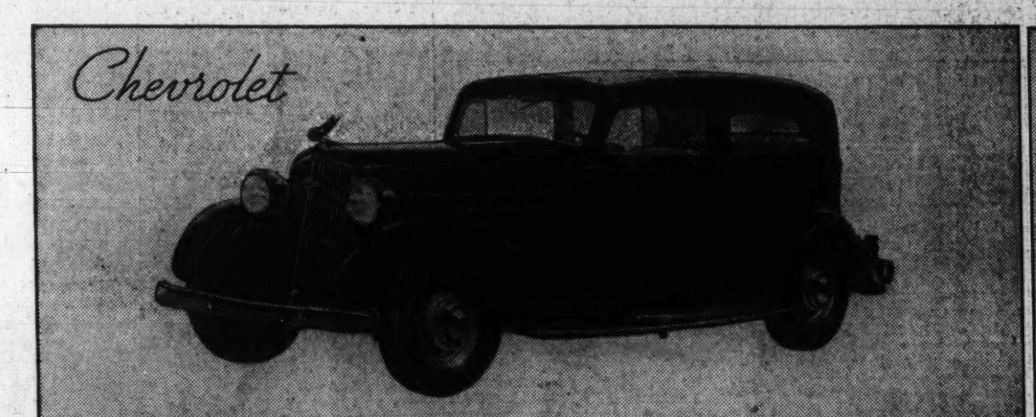
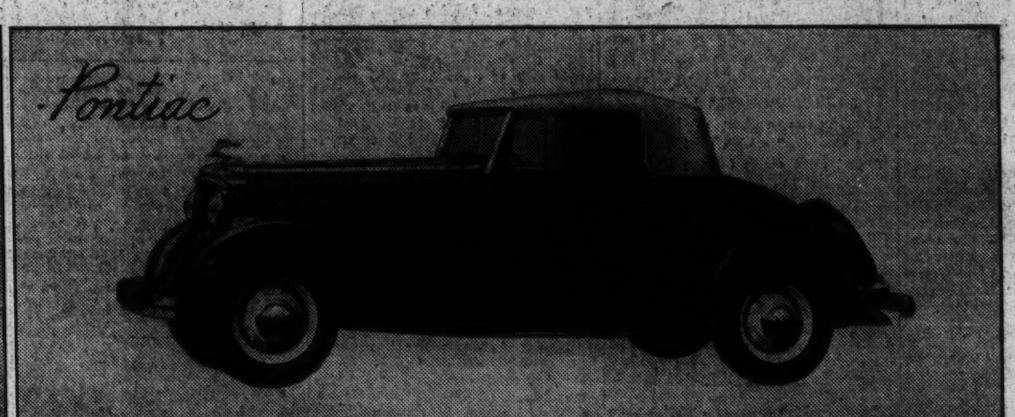
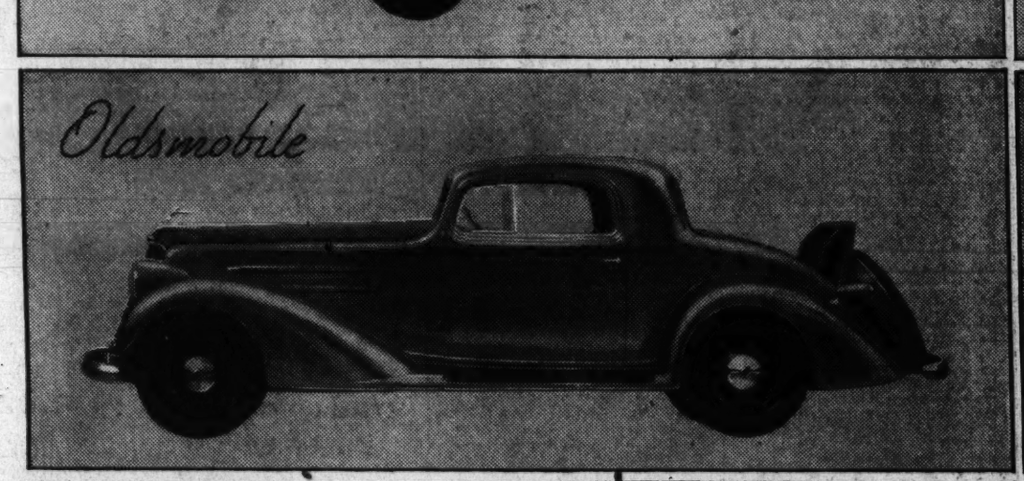
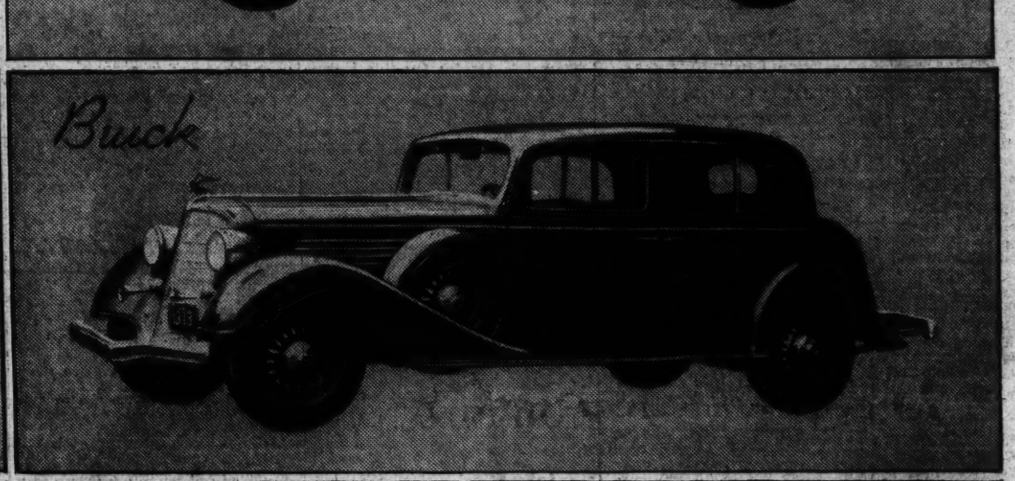
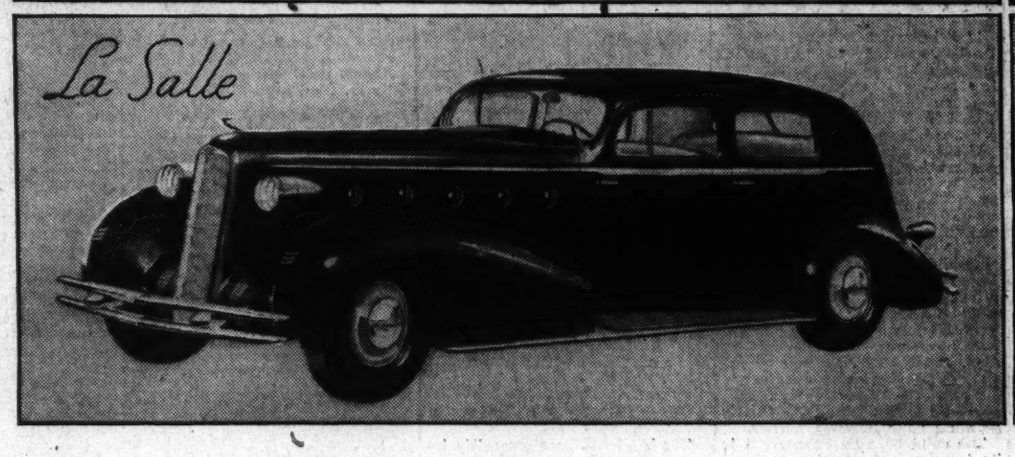
by GENERAL MOTORS

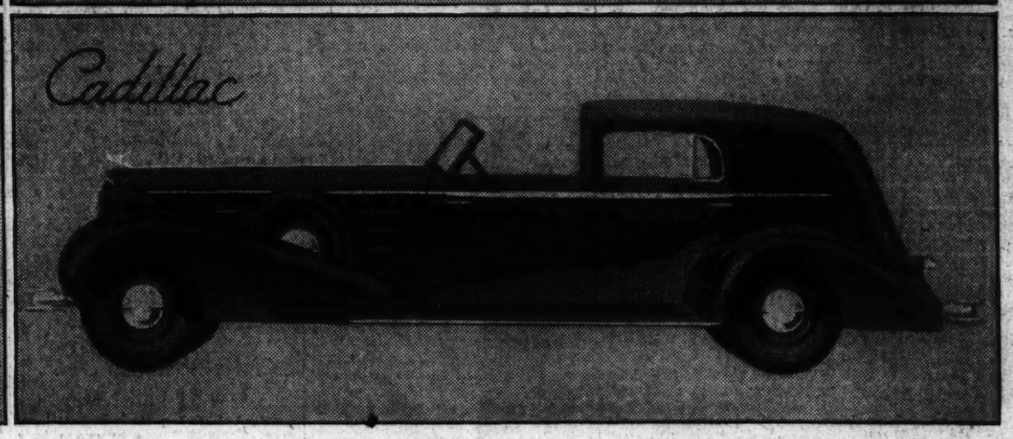












WHAT DO THE AMERICAN PEOPLE THINK IS BEAUTIFUL? The comments that you made at the Automobile Show were caught by eager ears listening for every murmur of criticism or praise.

We KNOW what today's Americans are saying of beauty in automobiles.

They say:

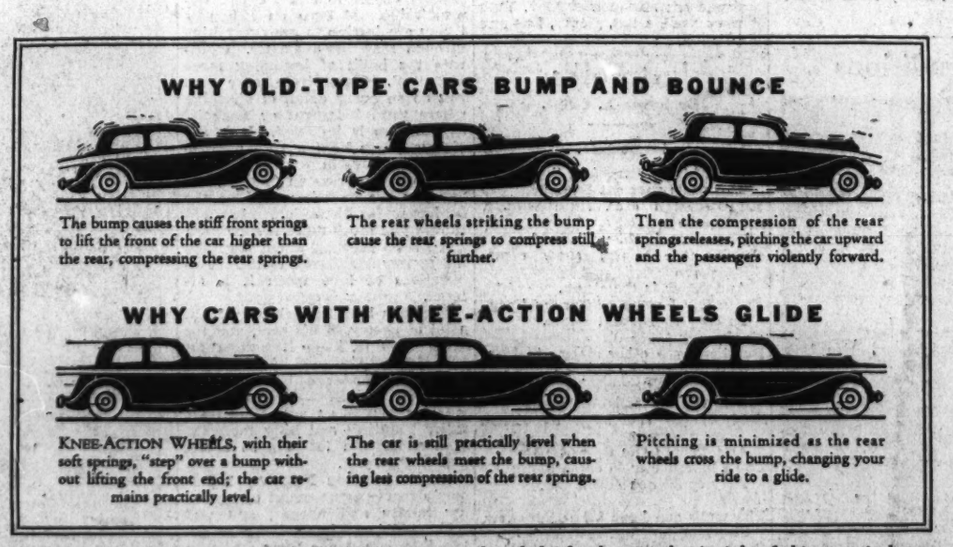
"We want our cars to have beauty which satisfies, not showiness that startles. We want them to have the beauty that one can live with and grow daily more contented with. We want them not to astonish but to be admired."

The 1934 General Motors cars have a consistent beauty that extends through the entire line. They have not only the beauty of appearance but the beauty of performance—the beauty which is embedded in the old-time truth: "Beauty is as beauty does."

AND WHAT IS PROGRESS? Progress connotes the strength and daring of the pioneer, the power to revolutionize. The self-starter, introduced on a General Motors car, revolutionized motoring. Four-wheel brakes, sponsored by another General Motors car, were a revolutionary development. So was Ethyl Gasoline, setting a new standard in motor fuel and making higher compression engines possible. Fisher No Draft Ventilation, a feature of all General Motors cars in 1933, was again revolutionary.

And this year KNEE-ACTION WHEELS! Pioneered by General Motors, proved through three years of gruelling experiment and test, KNEE-ACTION WHEELS have been the feature of the 1934 show. They abolish jar and jounce; the ride becomes a glide.

There will always be motoring progress. The General Motors Engineers, Research and Proving Ground assure that.



WHY OLD-TYPE CARS BUMP AND BOUNCE
The bump causes the stiff front springs to lift the front of the car higher than the rear, compressing the rear springs.
The rear wheels striking the bump cause the rear springs to compress still further.
Then the compression of the rear springs releases, pitching the car upward and the passengers violently forward.
WHY CARS WITH KNEE-ACTION WHEELS GLIDE
KNEE-ACTION WHEELS, with their soft springs, "step" over a bump without lifting the front end; the car remains practically level.
The car is still practically level when the rear wheels meet the bump, causing less compression of the rear springs.
Pitching is minimized as the rear wheels cross the bump, changing your ride to a glide.

An interesting booklet is available describing in more detail the fundamental principle of this new, independent front-wheel spring suspension. Simply address General Motors Corporation, New York or Detroit.

Donor Sends 30 Youths To College

Plan to Determine What Select Group Can Accomplish.

Their tuition paid by an anonymous donor, 30 Washington boys and girls who have been taking post-graduate work at high schools because they could not afford to enter college, are to be admitted to George Washington University.

The students have been selected by Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou and senior high school principals on the basis of scholastic ability. In leaving high schools, they wll make room for midyear graduates who wish to take post-graduate work.

In his annual report, Dr. Ballou warned that reduction in funds was making it increasingly difficult to accommodate post-graduate high school students. An article calling attention to this situation appeared exclusively in The Post. Later, Dr. Ballou gave assurance that the post-graduates would be enrolled. These announcements are believed to have prompted the support of the George Washington University donor.

The only expense facing the students will be books and registration fee. The offer has ben etxended by the university as an educational experiment, Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president, said. The object of the experiment, he said, is to determine what a select group of students can achieve in college study largely upon their own responsibility, but with the fullest cooperation of the university faculty.

The group will be free to attend whatever classes they wish, but will be held to no formal classroom requirements, Dr. Marvin said. In welcoming the students yesterday, the university president told them that he wished them to think of their study not in the customary terms of courses and credits, but rather in terms of accomplishments.

When any of the students feel that they have prepared themselves sufficiently in a subject they mya apply for a comprehensive examination, and upon passing the examination will be assigned a college credit. A full-time tutor will be engaged by the university to direct the experiment.

Navy to Build Guard Cutters

Seven of Gunboat Type Soon to Be Under Construction.

Seven cutters—$11,500,000 worth—are to be built for the Coast Guard by the Navy in the first cooperative enterprise to be undertaken by the services since their merger was recommended to President Roosevelt several weeks, ago, it was announced yesterday by Acting Secretary Henry Roosevelt.

Construction of the ships, of the gunboat type recently rejected as too expensive for the Coast Guard by Treasurer Secretary Henry Morgenthau, jr., will be started soon, one in Charleston Navy yard, four in Philadelphia and two in New York, according to Rear Admiral Harry L. Brinser, director of Navy yards.

Assimilation of the Coast Guard by the Navy is understood to have the approval of Navy officials. The report recommending the merger has been referred to the Treasury Department for further study.

14th Auto Show Makes Appeal To the Ladies

Luxury, Comfort, Durability Featured by Motor Companies.

With attendance at Washington's Fourteenth Automobile Show about equally divided between the sexes, representatives of the 19 motor car companies displaying new models are emphasizing the woman-appeal features of the 1934 automobile.

Improved mechanisms have made steering as automatic as possible. Starting in many of the cars is merely a matter of turning on the ignition switch. All cars are equipped with silent, easy-shifting gears. In some, gear-shifting is accomplished by stepping on the accelerator.

It is in the interior appointments of the new automobiles that the woman-appeal features predominate. Upholstering even in the lower-priced models is rich-appearing and durable. Seats, both front and rear, are deeper, more comfortable. Arm rests have been provided for both sides and center. Mirrors, vanity cases, cigarette containers and lighters adorn the tonneau. And there is scarcely a car at the show that has not been especially equipped for radio installation.

Safety factors also are appealing to buyers for women. All cars are sturdier, more durable with the likelihood of mechanical difficulties arising reduced to a minimum. Laminated, shatter-proof glass developed to the point where discoloration is unlikely is another safety feature.

That this year's show will break all attendance records seemed certain as admissions yesterday again totaled well above previous marks.

G. P. O. Upheld In Leave Denial

Employe's Claim to Time Due Before Economy Act Refused.

Refusal of Public Printer George H. Carter to permit William Fields, a proof reader in the Government Printing Office, to take 14½ days of leave that had accrued prior to the enactment of the economy act, was upheld by Justice Daniel W. O'Donoughue in District Supreme Court yesterday.

Fields, the Government, through Assistant United States Attorneys John W. Fihelly and John J. Wilson, contended, lost his leave by not applying for it before the start of the fiscal year. In support of his claim Fields charged the economy act was invalid in that it deprived him of leave without due process.

Attorneys William E. Leahy and Edmund Toland announced they would appeal the decision in an attempt to get a high court ruling to support their theory that Fields had a property right in the leave and that he could not, therefore, be deprived of it without due process of law.

Citizens Plan Sharp Protest On Street Cars

Clayton Says Service Is Unsatisfactory, Slow, Overcrowded.

A protest against street car service of the Capital Traction Co. and a demand for immediate improvement will be submitted to the Public Utilities Commission by the public utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations.

William McK. Clayton, chairman of the committee, yesterday appeared before the commission to complain against inadequate service and overcrowding. Mr. Clayton afterward said the present service is worse than during the World War, when the Capital was greatly overcrowded. The service was better, he believes, before the merger of the Washington Railway & Electric Co. with the Capital Traction Co.

Similar complaints have been received from Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, it was announced by Acting Chairman Riley E. Elgen, of the Public Utilities Commission. Mr. Elgen also said John W. Hanna, president of the traction company, had admitted service is not satisfactory.

Mr. Clayton said he made a trip Tuesday from Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest to Eighth and Kennedy streets northwest, which required 46 minutes. The usual time, he said, is 30 minutes.

At Fourteenth street and New York avenue, he said, there were 20 persons standing on the rear platform of the car, and when Fourteenth street and Park road was reached, there were 21 persons standing.

Labor Fight Delays Work On Buildings

"Triangle Twins" Held Up; Occupancy Date in Doubt.

Miss Perkins' Private Elevator Is Nearly Completed.

Completion of the new Labor and Interstate Commerce Commission Buildings, scheduled for occupancy this month, will be delayed indefinitely because of union disputes, it was learned yesterday.

The interconnected structures, erected at a cost of more than $10,000,000, could have been finished on time despite a six-week shutdown last fall but for three jurisdiction disputes now delaying progress, said E. A. Burnap, superintendent for the contractor, James Stewart & Co.

Carpenters and cement finishers are battling over which trade shall lay the tile floors. The ironworkers and carpenters both claim the scribe window molding and the same trades are involved in the fight over installation of radiator inclosures.

Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor and deputy NRA administrator, expressed grave concern but said he has no immediate intentions of demanding Congressional intervention.

Finish Is in Doubt.

If the three disputes, all of which are also holding up other work, are settled right away, the I. C. C. Building can be completed around March 1 and its twin on the Fourteenth street side about April 1. Otherwise, there is no predicting when the monumental buildings will be turned over to the Government, Burnap said.

One reason why the I. C. C. Building is farther advanced is because all its radiator shields, which inclose both the heating and air conditioning units, were installed before the storm broke. Half of them in Labor also are ready but the whole building's heating and cooling systems will be unworkable until installation is complete, according to the superintendent.

Work is proceeding on none of the disputed jobs. Consequently, the carpenter-cement finisher controversy is preventing work on partitions and metal trimmings, the window dispute is keeping a number of painters out of work and the inclosure battle is holding up plastering.

Breaks in Plaster.

Compliance with this "settlement" will mean Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, and a few hundred of her subordinates will have plaster-bespattered window sills and no heat or air conditioning, said Burnap.

Aside from these difficulties, work is moving swiftly on the "triangle twins." Miss Perkins' private elevator, to which she strongly objected and which she may never use, is almost done.

The Secretary's suite will consist of reception room, offices for private and confidential secretaries, her regular office and a private office. Also a handsome shower room of tile and marble. She will have a huge fireplace with marble mantel, a convenience provided for none of the Interstate Commerce Commissioners. They will have their private showers, though. So will Secretary Perkins' assistants.

Only One Fireplace.

But the only marble fireplace and the only private elevator will be reserved for the Secretary of Labor.

A large auditorium, intended for lectures, rather than theatrical performances, is the connecting wing. Directly below is the cafeteria, which will serve both buildings.

A tour of the basement revealed an automatic cuspidor cleaner and sterilizer, an incinerator to dispose of old papers, and an emergency heating plant with four 325-horsepower boilers. Three of the boilers were in use yesterday to dry out the buildings. Their fires will be put out when the building is occupied and connections made with the central heating plant.

A $340,400 elevator contract with Westinghouse provides 22 passenger lifts, two freights, a book lift that travels only 8 feet, three dumb waiters, and a few others of less definite classification. Also, of course, the private elevator.

Expert to Feed Needy Children Arrives Sunday

Building Sought Here for Kitchen to Replace Contract Meals.

Mrs. Katherine McFarland Ansley, of St. Paul, who has been engaged for two years in feeding of undernourished children, will arrive here Sunday to supervise distribution and preparation of food for District school children.

The announcement of Mrs. Ansley's selection was made by Commissioner George E. Allen. Upon her arrival she will begin arrangements for a kitchen to replace the present system of feeding the children by food prepared by a private contractor.

Mrs. Ansley, who is teh sister of Col. Earle McFarland, aid to the Assistant Secretary of War, will be paid out of emergency relief funds. She is a graduate of Kansas State College and has been a teacher of home economics at the University of Illinois.

The District repair shop yesterday estimated the cost of installing cooking equipment in the manual training school, at Wisconsin avenue and Q street, at $3,940. This provides for feeding 4,500 persons.

Studying possible sites for the kitchen, Dr. Louise Stanley, head of the Bureau of Home Economics of the Department of Agriculture, visited the manual training school, the Bradley Building, near the Department of Agriculture, and the old Cardozo Building in the Southwest section.

District Bank Bill Pushed in House

Would End Double Liabilit of Stockholders.

Chairman Norton of the House District Committee today will seek unanimous consent for House consideration of a bill to amend the District banking act as approved yesterday by the committee and previously passed by the Senate.

The bill, designed primarily to aid the merger of the Franklin, Washington Mechanics and Mount Vernon Savings Banks, would protect shareholders of savings banks, savings companies and banks from double liability.

The District Committee postponed action on the old-age-pension bill and the Capper-Norton alley improvement bill to await reports from the District Commissioners and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

District Rum Funds Voted In 13 Minutes

House and Senate Speed Appropriation for Board.

Offutt Appeals for Aid in Barring Abuses of Liquor.

Funds for the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board were voted by Congress with something like record speed yesterday.

The board was voted $23,054 for salaries and expenses, and an additional $3,613 was appropriated for additional expenses of the corporation counsel's office incident to enforcement of the new liquor law.

The figures represent the sum asked by the District Commissioners between now and July 1, less 15 per cent for salary reductions.

Approval of the requested appropriation was reported by the House Appropriations Committee and the appropriation was made by the House within three minutes.

Senate Fast, Too.

Senator Adams, (Dem.), Colorado, made a favorable report for the Senate Appropriations Committee, and the Senate passed the measure within 10 minutes after the bill was received from the House.

Meantime, existing high prices on retail liquor came in for another scourging in the House in a debate on the appropriation.

Representative Cochran (Democrat), Missouri, declared the high prices indicated the eighteenth amendment had been repealed for the benefit of the bootleggers.

He was joined by Representative O'Connor (Democrat), New York, who charged distillers are getting ten times more money for their products now than they did before prohibition.

Pleads for Citizens' Aid.

A pledge to prevent the return of the bar room and to drive the bootlegger from business was joined with a plea for cooperation of all citizens in the enforcement of the District liquor law in a broadcast last night by George W. Offutt, chairman of the Liquor Control Board.

He also cautioned prospective applicants not to try to bring influence to have their applications hastily considered.

In a general explanation of the purposes of the District law, Mr. Offutt observed: "Every line of it strikes at the heart of the saloon or bar room. There is no place for this institution in the Capital of the Nation."

"Our law is all that could be desired in liberality and, by reason of this fact, should constitute an appeal to all of us to respect the law, and as law-abiding citizens to give it our unstinted support," he said.

Ancient Dieting.

The Duke of Burgundy, wise Philip the Good, would start in on Monday to eat as he should; he wished to live longer than three score and ten, he wished to be stronger than other great men. And so, on the quiet, he called in the docs, to govern his diet and save him from shocks. Six doctors behind him stood up on their feet to guide and remind him of things he should eat. Six doctors were posted around, every meal, to test the things roasted and sample the veal. It called for some daring to bid the Duke quit, when he thought a herring would make a great hit. The strain was quite awful, when they would explain, "Your Highness, that waffle would give you a pain." They'd mutter, "Your Highness, the wine cup eschew; to conquer your dryness cold water will do." They watched all the dishes with vigilant eyes, the loaves and the fishes, the doughnuts and pies. The Duke ate his lunches with docs to explain their various hunches, his health to maintain. And if indigestion within him prevailed, the Duke asked no question—the doctors were jailed. In beastly conditions they sat down to sob, and other physicians had taken their job. I envy the ruler who rolled up his socks and sent to the cooler the dieting docs.

Hargaden Leads Georgetown Quintet to 27-24 Victory Over Army

Navy Downs N. Carolina By 26-24

Tarheels, Outplayed for Half, Fall Short in Sensational Rally.

Borries and Dounin Star Roles; Weathers Is Visiting Ace.

ANNAPOLIS Md., Jan. 31 (AP).—Outplayed in the first half, basket ballers of the University of North Carolina staged a fine rally in the second session, but fell two points short, so the Annapolis Midshipmen garnered laurels in a fast and well-played game here today, 26 to 24.

With "Buzz" Borris showing the way, as usual, and ably assisted by Dusty Dorin, the Naval lads jumped into an early lead and were never overtaken. Bob Mandelkorn started Navy in the winning stride by getting a field goal, after cleverly dribbling nearly the full length of the court, and a moment later Borries registered a double-decker.

During the first six minutes of play the Tar Heels appeared absolutely helpless, so strong was Navy's defense, two foul goals being all that rewarded their efforts and Navy was leading, 9 to 2. Soon after this the visitors picked up somewhat, but at half time, the Middies felt fairly comfortable, being in the van at 18 to 8.

Rival Defenses Tighten.

The second half opened with both teams displaying powerful defensive, and scoring was slow. The Carolinas, however, showed improved form and for a time held a slight edge, reducing Navy's lead by 4 points in 10 minutes of work. The score at that stage was, Navy, 21; Carolina, 16. Meanwhile, the Tarheel regulars, plainly showing the effect of the fast pace, especially after a hard game against Maryland last night, which they won, gave way to subs for a brief period. With five minutes of play remaining, the group returned to the floor. Navy then was leading, 26 to 15. Weathers, who played a brilliant game throughout started the Carolina rally with two field goals in quick succession. Both were long-range shots. The Middies now were battling almost entirely on the defensive. Glace helped the Carolina cause by a penalty goal, and Aiken and D. McCachein came along with double-deckers, the latter score being just before the final whistle.

Agua Caliente Is Topped by Wood's 67

AGUA CALIENTE, Mex., Jan. 31 (U.P.).—Craig Wood, big blond professional from Deal, N. J., set a new course record of 67 to lead all competitors today in the opening round of the fifth annual $7,500 Agua Caliente Open golf championship.

Wood's brillians round was four under par and one stroke better than the best previous card ever made in tournament competition.

Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., the defending Agua Caliente champion, strove manfully to maintain the gruelling pace with a 69, which landed him in third place to tie with Wiffy Cox, of Brooklyn.

Von Elm Shoots 71.

Par 71's were shot by George Von Elm, the Los Angeles "business man golfer," Leo Diegel, of Philadelphia; Denny Shute, of Miami; the current British open champion, Horton Smith, of Chicago; Mark Fry, of San Francisco; Stan Kertes, of Los Angeles.

Wood was the leading money winner in last year's California money events. He captured the Los Angeles, Pasadena and San Francisco tournaments, but cracked under the strain at Agua Caliente. His performances so far this year had been ordinary, but he served notice today that he was back in form. His round would have been still more startling if he had not missed 3-foot putts on both the seventeenth and eighteenth holes. He took pars on these, narrowly missing birdies. His card:

Par out .....4 4 3 4 4 4 4 5 3—35
Wood out ....5 4 3 4 3 4 4 5 2—34
Par in .....4 3 5 4 4 3 4 5 4—36—71
Wood in .....3 3 5 4 3 2 4 5 4—33—67

The best previous rounds were by Gene Sarazen in winning the 1930 tournament and Fred Morrison, who was 1932 champion. Both had 68s.

Vines, Home, Elated at Success

Says Game Is Improved; Sorry He Didn't Turn Pro Sooner.

PASADENA, Calif., Jan. 31 (AP).—Back home, but no longer "broke," is Ellsworth Vines, jr., by profession a tennis player.

Gone is his fear of being termed a "tennis bum," a fear that haunted him for several years while his mother worked in a department store. Greatly improved is his game, a game that lifted him to the world's amateur championship.

Pasadena officially extended him the key to the city, showered praise on his performance as a member of a traveling tennis troupe, and wished him continued success in his new venture. The welcome smacked of the enthusiasm that accompanied his return with the Wimbledon and national crowns in 1932.

"It's Great," He Says.

With all the feasting and handshaking and a third "business appointment" in as many nights with the one and only Bill Tilden, this time at Long Beach, Vines found time to discuss his vocation.

"It's great," he beamed in boyish enthusiasm. "My only regret is that I didn't get into professional tennis sooner.

"But it isn't as easy as I had expected. In fact, it's mighty hard work. That endurance grind Tilden and I put on in Los Angeles the other night tired me out completely. I could hardly raise my right hand after it was all over, and I guess Bill didn't feel exactly refreshed."

Vines says that in spite of the physical tax he is playing better tennis.

"What I like about it is that my mind is at rest," he continued. "I can concentrate now on my game and I don't have to worry about finances. I am playing 100 per cent better than I was last summer.

"How do you like the way I'm hitting my shots from the backhand? I can find the corners of the court again with it. My overhead smash is improved. I couldn't keep it in the court here at the Pacific Southwest tournament last fall."

"How about Tilden; does he still

Men's Squash Team Routs U. S. Women

It was the second defeat in three starts for the invaders.

Rosenbloom Choice Over Knight

Not since 1894, when Jim Corbett knocked out Charlie Mitchell in the third round of a heavyweight scrap, has a championship fight been staged in this State, because of a legislative act.

The law still is on the books, but despite the fact the Rosenbloom-Knight battle has not been advertised as a championship affair, it already has been agreed that the fighter who climbs out of the ropes the winner of tomorrow night's bout will be recognized as the world's light-heavyweight title holder.

Taper Off for Bout.

How successful the fight will be from a financial standpoint is problematical. Rosenbloom has been given a $15,000 guarantee, which was the approximate figure reported tonight by Garden officials from ticket sales to date.

Both fighters expect to weigh in tomorrow at a pound or two under the 175 limit.

Harrisonburg Plans For Baseball Season

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.). The Harrisonburg Baseball Club, which sponsored the Shenandoah Valley League champions last season, has reorganized to get off to an early start in assembling another strong aggregation.

E. L. "Cap" Klingstein is president of the club, with Herbert Hawkins, vice president; O. D. Shank, league director; Rufus Heatwole, treasurer; William N. Lineweaver, secretary; James W. Lineweaver, business manager, and D. R. Vine, member of the board of directors.

Coach Claude Warren, of the Harrisonburg High School, who starred as a hurler and center fielder last season, has been named playing manager.

The make-up of the valley circuit has not been determined at this early date but fans are hopeful that the same four clubs will compose the circuit. Bridgewater, Woodstock, New Market and Harrisonburg completed the circuit in its first year of operation last season. A meeting will be held within the next few weeks to determine the status of the circuit for the season.

Martinsburg Quintet Wins Shutout, 40 to 0

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.).—The nearest to perfect basket ball game on record here was that turned in when the Martinsburg High School five defeated Hedgesville High, 40 to 0.

Martinsburg's play was so clean that only one personal foul was called. Hedgesville was unable to make capital of that.

Trophy Awarded Lund.

Kids' Team Heeds Roosevelt Plea; Gives Hospital $4,730

AKRON, Ohio, Jan. 31 (AP).—From a scrappy small boys' football team, inspired by President Roosevelt and overflowing with the blessing of robust health, came proof today that adults are not the only ones giving remarkable as well as generous aid to children sick or crippled.

This group of midget-sized football warriors, descriptively named the Akron Red Peppers, are giving the entire cash profits made possible on the gridiron by their own good health, to aid adults and children who have been stricken.

No matter of "childish pennies" is this, for last year the Red Pepers made profits of which many a college team might well be envious—a total of $4,730.

They have given $1,600 to a free tuberculosis clinic here, and today through another donation from the team, more than 60 child victims of infantile paralysis were assured the same hydrotherapeutic treatment that helped President Roosevelt some years ago.

This newest act of the youngster's team will provide for the installation and use in Children's Hospital here of a large hydrotherapy tank, in which little ones whose bodies have been stricken by the dreaded paralysis may be placed in warm waters while nurses and physicians aid the exercises that lead the victims from despair to recovery.

Every year the boys play 11 games, last year they drew 48,611 paid admissions, and suffered only one defeat when, by a score of 7 to 6, they were nosed out of the national championship.

Willaman Quits At Ohio State; Lands Job

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 31 (AP).—The coaching situation at two Ohio universities was changed today when Sam Willaman resigned as director of football at Ohio State and Western Reserve announced he had signed a three-year contract to replace Tom Keady.

Unconfirmed reports said Clark Shaughnessy, coach at the University of Chicago, would replace Willaman. The Ohio State Board of Athletic Control, however, appointed a committee to investigate the records of several coaches, whose names it withheld.

Rest Not Affected.

L. W. St. John, Ohio State athletic director, announced the remainder of his staff would not be affected by Willaman's resignation.

At Western Reserve Willaman was named as acting professor of physical education and director of intercollegiate football. While his resignation is not effective at Ohio State until June 30, he will assume his new duties at Western Reserve March 1.

Was Not Unexpected.

Willaman's resignation was not unexpected. He had been under the fire of "down-town" coaches and a certain faction of the student body of Ohio State since his team lost to Michigan last October. It was the Buckeyes' only defeat.

Willaman had been at Ohio State for seven years, serving under Dr. J. W. Wilce as assistant coach until the latter resigned at the close of the 1928 season under similar circumstances. During his five years in charge of football Willaman's teams won 26 games, lost 10, and tied 5.

Hardin Cancels Plans For Millrose Debut

Baton Rouge, La., Jan. 31 (AP).—Glenn "Slats" Hardin, Louisiana State University's middle distance and hurdling Olympic and national title winner, has canceled plans to make his indoor track debut at the Millrose meet in New York.

Louisiana State's speedster was to have left next Saturday for the Millrose competition but it was announced today that because of the meet coming during end-of-term examinations, he would stay on the campus.

Immaculates Divide.

Immaculate Conception School Basket Ball Team broke even in a double-header yesterday, trouncing the St. Martin's Team, 52-20, but losing the night-cap against an Alumni quintet, 38-27.

Immaculate will play its old rival, Sacred Heart, this afternoon on the latter's floor.

Bassin Leads Attack as Series Leaders Win.

A barrage of field goals straight from the trusty arms of Eastern High School's basket ball sharpshooters crushed Episcopal High School yesterday on the former's court, and resulted in a 64-27 victory for the District prep school pacesetters.

Leading the onslaught were Harry Bassin, forward, who scored 16 points; Tom Nolan, forward, with 10, and Dizzy Dean, guard, with 10.

Hoyas Select Relay Team For Games

Bradley, Treacy, Quirk, McNeil Run Saturday in Millrose.

FLYING spikes, beating a steady rhythm on the cold, creaking surface of Georgetown's track, yesterday served warning on Rutgers and St. John's, of Brooklyn, that the Hoyas will be a real contender when the three match strides Saturday night in the Millrose games 1-miles relay. After being held indoors for two days because of unusually cold weather, the Hilltoppers redoubled their efforts to regain lost ground, and from all indications will be at their peak for the big test.

Coach Jim Mulligan yesterday named Wilmer Bradley, Bert Treacy, John Quirk and Paul McNeil as Georgetown's quartet. The four hung up the best time in trials, outracing a dozen other aspirants. Bradley's time was particularly good, according to Mulligan, and he may be used at the anchor position. Starting positions have not been announced.

Georgetown will send only its relay team to the games. The four will leave early Saturday morning for New York, and return immediately after running. Rutgers, with a veteran team entered, is favored to finish ahead of the Hilltoppers and St. John's.

Metcalf Tops List.

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—Ralph Metcalfe, of Marquette, National sprint champion, heads a list of 16 fleet dash men who will compete in the 60-yard invitation sprint of the Millrose A. A. Games Saturday.

Metcalfe, Emmett Toppino, of New Orleans, who gave the Marquette Negro flash his only setback in 44 races last year; Bert Pearson, of Canada, and Dick Bell, of Massachusetts Tech, I. C. 4-A 70-yard title holder, are regarded as the "big four" of the sprint field.

Kai-Finn Captures Second Win in Row

Triumphs by Two Lengths at Fair Grounds.

New Orleans, Jan. 31 (AP).—True to his blood lines, Kai-Finn, a 6-year-old son of Kai Sang, was at home in the sloppy going at the Fair Grounds today, winning the 6-furlong sprint for veteran campaigners over 4 years of age.

In hanging up his second straight victory over a heavy track, Kai-Finn set all the pace and crossed the finish line with two lengths to spare over the 5-year-old Judge Primrose, once a handicap performer, Preferred, 7 years old, was third in the field of ten.

From the rise of the barrier, Kai-Finn took the lead and was never seriously challenged as he splashed through the three-quarters of a mile of mud in 1:16 3-5. He paid $13.20 straight.

N. C. State Host To Wake Forest

Victory Would Aid Team in Race for Title.

Raleigh, Jan. 31 (Spl.).—Wake Forest, conquerors of Davidson, 34-25, Monday night at Davidson in a Big Five game, will face State College here Friday night in another Big Five battle.

Wake Forest, having lost three State games, is out of the Big Five race, but State, with three wins and one loss, is still very much "in," and a win over the Deacons would give the Red Terrors a chance at the loop leadership, provided Carolina defeats Duke Saturday.

In trouncing Davidson on the Wildcats' home court Monday, Wake Forest showed more form than at any other time this season.

Charles Town High Wins Court Twin Bill

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.).—Charles Town High School easily took a double-header basket ball game from Hedgersville High Schol, the boys' team winning by a 38-7 score and the girls' squad being on the long end of a 61-2 victory.

A tight zone defense and accurate passing were responsible for the Charles Town boys' showing. The Hedgersville hoopsters were kept to a lone tally, and that on a free throw, throughout the first half, while the Charles Towners were scoring 20 points.

Charles Town girls came close to shutting out their fair opponents, score at the end of the third quarter standing at 46-0, but Miss Evelyn Norrington, visiting forward, broke into the point column with a field goal in the final period.

Thirty of the home team's 61 tallies were scored by Miss Dorothy Bailey, diminutive sharpshooting forward.

Hilltop Star Leads With 5 Baskets

Capital Tossers Draw Away After Breaking 17-17 Tie.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Jan. 31 (Spl.).—Led by lanky Ed Hargaden, one of the best all-around players seen here this winter, Georgetown University scored a 27-24 victory over Army in a close and well played game before a large throng. The visitors held a 10-7 advantage at half-time, but were obliged to fight for their laurels when the Cadets twice tied the score in the second half.

Georgetown displayed a speedy floor attack, sharp passing and deadly accuracy on their shots. Hargaden was particularly effective, sinking five spectacular field goals to top both teams in scoring. Clifford, with three double-deckers, was Army's chief scoring threat. Both quintets resorted to close guarding throughout.

Army Gets Good Start.

Army got off to a flying start when Hyatt and Dewalt sank field goals in the first minute of play. Goals by Crowley and Connors, and fouls by Corliss and O'Connor, however, erased this lead and turned the tide in the visitor's favor and they went on to top at the intermission.

The Cadets brought the crowd to its feet in the second half after Georgetown had added to its lead when Jack Clifford and Ned Kennerick sank long pot shots in rapid succession, knotting the count at 15-15. Connors put the Hilltoppers ahead with a corner shot, but Clifford pocketed another long shot, tying the score at 17-17.

Army's joy was short-lived for Georgetown settled down and with a clever, well-timed passing attack sifted through the Cadet's defense for three buckets to assume a commanding lead which it held until the end. Neeley and Kennerick instigated a rally with only two minutes left to play, but it was nipped in the bud by the visitor's close guarding.

Virginia Horse Center Seeks Racing

Fredericksburg Bidding for Track if State Race Bill Is Passed.

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.).—That Fredericksburg will become one of the three sites for legalized horse racing in Virginia, provided the General Assembly repeals the present ban on racing and provides for licensed tracks in the State, is the determination of horse owners and fanciers of surrounding counties, who are beginning a movement to that end.

Its proximity to Washington, Richmond and Baltimore has been forwarded with its location near the famous Virginia "horse country" as Fredericksburg's principal advantages as a proposed site.

Passage of an act by the General Assembly to regulate and license horse racing in Virginia has been enthusiastically advocated by the Horse Breeders' Association at Warrenton, the Virginia Association of Fairs, and similar organizations.

Three 1-mile licensed tracks to be designated in portions of the State are provided for in the bill, which includes sections that two-thirds of the income from these tracks are to go to the support of public schools and that one-third will be divided among agricultural fairs which have and will comply with certain set standards of agricultural education.

A recent meeting of horse owners and admirers from and near Fredericksburg decided to encourage in every way possible the bill's enactment, and the consequent location of one of the tracks in this city. Those who favor the plan were asked to write to their representatives in the House of Delegates and the Senate.

Cocquel Nips Track Record, Wins by 3 Lengths Over Flying Sailor at Hialeah

Litzenberger Rides Filly To Victory

HIALEAH PARK, Jan. 31 (AP).—Another track record was shattered here this afternoon when W. Graham's Coequel, a three-year-old gray filly, which won her first local start a few days ago as an invader from Texas, captured the Clearwater Purse from a smart field. The daughter of Cotlogomer, carrying the trifling package of 92 pounds, ran the six furlongs in 1:10 1-5, a fifth of a second better than Character's record. A. A. Baroni's Flying Sailor trailed the winner by three lengths, while Mrs. J. H. Whitney's Crowning Glory was beaten a similar distance for the place. Coequel returned $10.60 for straight.

The Clearwater was one of two feature events on a bargain bill of eight races. Beginning today, and on each succeeding Wednesday, the second race will be designated as a charity event, the net mutuel proceeds being given over to Hialeah and vicinity.

Sassafras Far Behind.

C. V. Whitney's Sassafras was favorite for the Clearwater and beat one horse. The colt failed to reveal any of the speed that marked his recent effort.

Brandon Mint, a star of other days making his local bow, headed Crowning Glory until the top of the stretch, where the latter dashed into a daylight advantage. Eddie Litzenberger, who had rated Coequel close off the pace, brought the gray sprinter around the field and his mount easily rushed into command to move well clear. Flying Sailor, away tardily, had no trouble passing tired horses for the place award.

Fourth for Clarify.

Morton L. Schwartz' colt Clarify won his fourth race in as many winter starts in the Tamiami handicap of 6 furlongs, twin-feature with the Clear Water. The 4-year-old son of Chatterton again found it an easy task to defeat a strong field, Lee Humphries having the favorite in hand as he finished out in 1:10 4-5. Mrs. T. Hunt's Zorana surprised by her fine effort, finishing a length and a half behind the winner and a nose before Quel Jeu.

Fresh from an imposing victory in the Hialeah Inaugural, Clarify paid $3.90 for $2. Humphries broke the colt well and took him under restraint behind Gift of Roses. Zorana and Quel Jeu also raced close up with the pace. At the top of the stretch Clarify bounded to the front and gradually increased his margin. Zorana held on gamely to beat Quel Jeu.

Starter Cassidy suspended Jockey H. Dabson two days for misbehavior at the post in the third race. Jockey H. Thurber was given three days for a similar offense in the fourth event.

Pardee Wins by Nose.

Pardee, the Belair Stud's diminutive 5-year-old, returning to the racing, was in fine fettle for the mile event that opened the card. Short of stature but long in heart, the $5.40 favorite outgamed Boy Crazy to score by a nose. Marcasite, coming from last place, was beaten another nose for the place.

Two first-time starters accounted for first and second positions in the juvenile dash. Mrs. Payne Whitney's Basquine, a fast thing from the gate, led all the way, but was ridden out to the limit to beat Angelic by a head. The latter, sporting the brand-new racing silks of Mrs. Damon Runyon, finished impressively and had a length to spare over Migrate for the place. The winner paid $13.60 and her time was 0:34 2-5.

Salisbury In Form.

Salisbury, 6-year-old light gray gelding, was at top form to take the third purse in a canter by 5 lengths from Blackmock. Chuck B was a well-beaten third. Salisbury did not move up until midway the back stretch. He came around the leaders entering the stretch and drew far clear. Blackmock, always in the thick of the fight, held on well for the place. Salisbury, close second choice to Blackmock, paid $9.20.

Bittybit overcame difficulty to win the fourth race under Earl Porter's rousing finish. Ladogan ran the winner to a head while saving the runner-up position by a nose from Battering Kate. Highdine, poorly handled, was a good fourth. Battering Kate showed the way to Ladogan and Bittybit, the latter being pinched back before leaving the back stretch. Gradually making up ground in the final quarter, Bittybit caught the leaders late in the home lane to return $5.80.

Johnny Gilbert put up a great finish to win the seventh contest astride the favorite, High Proof. High Proof and Ukraine fought it out heads apart for the last 3 furlong of the mile and a furlong trip, with the $4.90 choice holding gamely to a narrow advantage. Just Remember was third, two lengths away.

Earl Porter completed a double in the last race, lifting Judge Schilling over the line a nose winner at $10.40 for $2. Haggerson beat Blimp by two lengths for the place.

Saranacs Want Game.

The Saranac A. C. Community Center League leaders desire to book a game for tonight with a strong team. The Saranacs have engaged Central High gym for 8:30 o'clock. Call Manager Atkins at Adams 4022.

Sequoyah, who was also known as George Guess, was a Cherokee Indian of mixed blood. When he was about 50 years old he was impressed by the white man's way of communicating in writing. He set out to devise a similar system for his own people. He started with an old speller, taking English characters of which he knew nothing, and fitting them into his own plans. Other signs and letters he designed himself.

When finished he had 85 characters, each of which represented a definite sound in the Cherokee language. The task took him 12 years to complete. The system was notable in that anyone who could speak the Cherokee language could learn to read and write in a short time —many Indian children mastered it in a single day. It was in honor of Sequoyah that the giant Sequoia trees of the Pacific Coast were named.

Emmitsburg Clinches Sectional Cage Title

Emmitsburg, Md., Jan. 31 (Spl.).—Emmitsburg scored a double victory over Thurmont in the Northern Division of the County High School League, the boys winning 38 to 31, and the girls, 25 to 9. The victories clinched the sectional pennant for the Emmitsburg teams, which will meet the winners of the Southern Division for the championship of the county.

The north-county boys took the lead at the start and gradually pulled away from their rivals. Thurmont staged a rally in the fourth period, but was unable to overcome the early lead.

Dear Al: Hialeah Park, Jan. 31.

Jockey Hank Mills, as you perhaps already know, has decided to quit the saddle due to increasing weight. Although Mills probably is cussing his luck, I'm here to tell you that Hank is a lucky boy. At least, Mills is leaving the game with his health, thanks to those who have had him in charge. Mills was one boy who was not allowed to take off weight by any unnatural means. He was allowed to reduce the poundage only by road work. Yes, sir, Hank piled on the sweaters, went out on the road and jogged each morning. No pills, no Turkish baths and no weakening diets were allowed in his case. Mills made money, was never mentioned in any scandal and his only infraction of rules came because he was over-zealous in trying to get his mounts home. Mills is in his early teens and has plenty of time to make good in another field. Should he fail, it will not be for lack of courage and common sense enough to listen to older and wiser heads. He did that as a jockey. BILL.

First race—Quickly lives up to his name. Can turn on the speed. Dropped back after getting away fast last out. Appears to be well placed in this field. Longford has been showing steady form Might surprise here. The lightly-weighted Prize Package to take care of the others.

Second race—Somebody and Flint Shot, the Widener entry, shape up as a hustling pair in this sprint. Either can take it. Beoff, one of the Bradley color bearers, was a fast-moving horse at the finish of that last effort.

Third race—Claremont was only fooling the other day, so I'm told. The clockers have given their stamp of approval on this one. Wedding Ring is the likely favorite. Macadam is a dangerous sort.

Fourth race—Fancy Flight has defeated as good as these and comes to the race sharp as a tack. Needs a hustling ride, however. Butter Beans pack a punch and may improve over that race of last week. Crazy Jane for the show end

Fifth race—Chimney Top and Jockey Coucci are a formidable pair in this test. Both are in excellent form. The Bailiff will be hard to keep out of the money circle. Taunton won a cheaper race for us the other day, but can have third among these.

Sixth race—God O'War won at a mile over at Tropical Park. Was rather ambitiously placed the last time. Gets a field to his liking in this and I believe he will set the pace all the way. Eurydice is the one to beat. Border Patrol to beat the others.

Seventh race—Momo fell down on the Bennings camp in that previous outing. Get in this with light weight and figures to take care of Well Built and Fabius.

Grand National's Field Is Cut to 54

12 Horses, Including U. S. Owned Jack O'Day Out.

London, Jan. 31 (AP).—The field for the Grand National Steeplechase to be run at Aintree March 23 was reduced to 54 today when 12 horses, including F. Ambrose Clark's American-owned Jack O'Day, were declared out.

Previously the field had been reduced by the withdrawal of George H. (Pete) Bostwick's American jumper, Chanango; the 1931 winner, Grakle; Millionaire II, Swan O'Favon, Sir Dennis, Mighty Chance and Kilcashill, which died.

The other jumpers declared out today were Brienz, El Hadjar, Prince Marlo, Gatebook, the White Rambler, Silver Grail, Shoreman, Shady Lake, Zag, Ottawa and Cinder Track.

6 V.M.I. Teams In Clashes Saturday

Rasslers, Boxers, Cagemen Face Hard Contests in Foes' Lairs.

LEXINGTON, Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.).—Six V. M. I. teams will go forth to do battle with stout rivals Saturday. The varsity and freshman wrestlers and freshman boxers will all meet Navy teams at Annapolis Saturday afternoon. At night the varsity boxers will trade punches with the Catholic University team in Washington.

The Cadet varsity and first-year basket ball teams will invade Blacksburg for the first of a pair of home-and-home contests with Virginia Tech.

Will Change Line-Up.

Coach "Mooney" Landis will present a slightly changed line-up from the one that outclassed Davidson but lost to N. C. State in wrestling by two points. To make way for Sam Lowe, 225-pound football star, Capt. Charlie Dorrier, John Burgess and Bill Currence will move down one weight class. These three veterans and Charlie Lathrop, 135-pounder, have been winners in both meets.

There are three undefeated boxers on Coach Al Martin's ring teams. Capt. George Eddie Bain, varsity lightweight, has gained decisions over opponents from Maryland, Virginia and V. P. I. Ross Eastham, freshman featherweight, won his matches against Virginia and V. P. I., while Garnett Lee earned draws in the same two meets.

have a lot on the ball?" Vines was asked.

"He's tough to figure. He mixes up his cut shots so you never know for sure whether they will bounce. Sometimes they don't bounce at all. When you feel he's worn down, tired out, he hits the ball so fast you can't see it.

Defends Honesty of Play.

Vines was quick to attack the suggestion that his matches with Tilden might have been prearranged.

"It's strange how some people come out to see us play with the idea that everything is cut and dried," he said. "I feel it everywhere we go. It seems to me that 44-set match Tilden won the other night in Los Angeles is sufficient answer. Tennis is business with Tilden and me. We can not afford to lose."

Wilson Can't Be a Holdout; Hasn't Yet Received Offer

NEW YORK, Jan. 31 (AP).—Bob Quinn, business manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, came back today from a mysterious trip here and there, all confused about stories that have been getting into the newspapers during his absence.

"I read that Joe Stripp, our third baseman, and Hack Wilson, our outfielder, are both holdouts, which puzzles me greatly," he said.

"I don't know what they can be holding out about. We haven't even sent them contracts yet."

"And who," asked the man who used to own the Boston Red Sox, "have you traded for us today? I must keep abreast of such things."

The trading market, he was informed, is dull at the moment, whereupon he divulged a speck or two of news himself. He wouldn't say, though, where his business dealings carried him for the past few days.

"We've been talking trades with several other fellows," he said, "and we've made a couple of propositions and received a couple more. But every one has decided that the best place to get together and really do business will be the National League meeting here next week.

"Our manager, Max Carey, will be on hand then and so will Bill McKechnie, of the Braves. They've got a deal brewing, but there's no telling what will develop until the two managers sit down together and talk things over."

He reads with awe, he said, some of the trades that have been suggested for him off hand in the public prints.

"The Braves are sending us Shortstop Bill Urbanski, First Baseman Baxter Jordan and Pitcher Huck Betts for our first baseman, Sam Leslie; Sam Leslie, Stripp, Wilson, Catcher Al Lopez and the best pitcher we own, Van Mungo.

"Trouble with those deals is we could make them ourselves if we were foolish enough. More trouble is that's about the kind of a deal they offer you these days. Everybody wants to swap a couple of ball players for a ball club."

Due to Be Traded.

Quinn indicated, however, that Stripp, Wilson and Glenn Wright, the veteran shortstop, would be traded sooner or later. There are more on the list, but Bob will only give you a clew when you're able to guess their names yourself. He won't tell you.

"Tony Cuccinello?" he was asked.

"Nope; he's got his contract," was the answer there, though Tony's name has been mentioned frequently by outsiders during trading discussions.

"We haven't sent Stripp, Wilson or Wright contracts," he said, "and a pretty good guesser might draw the conclusion that you don't sign up players you intend to trade.

"The other fellow prefers to do that after he gets them."

BOY CRAZY circled field, closed with a rush, and ran good race. MARCASITE badly outrun, as usual, in early part, finished with a rush and would have won in a few more strides. PENCADER well up all the way. CHAIN had plenty of speed for six furlongs. THE KING tired.

BASQUINE, a rapid beginner, broke fast, was hustled into lead, and ran straight and held on well. ANGELIC, away slowly, moved up with a rush and was wearing the winner down. ANGELIC finished in the middle of the track. MIGRATE got away fast, showed speed, and finished gamely. GREENSTONE is sure to improve. TABITHA ran well, but dropped right out of it, and never made up any ground. GOLDEN DREAM had plenty of early speed.

CHUCK B. well up all the way, held on gamely. POLITICAL ran into lead early, but weakened badly in final furlong. BUN D, closed a big gap.

BITTYBIT broke fast, but was pinched back in the first quarter-mile, recovered, and closed with a rush. LADOGAN was a keen factor all the way and held on gamely. BARTERING KATE rushed into lead, saved ground, but tired suddenly. HIGH DINE was probably best, but received a poor-judged ride. She closed very fast and was wearing the leaders down. CABOUSE, on the inside all the way.

COEQUEL, under light weight, was rated along back of the fast early pace, came around field entering stretch, closed very fast, and won going away. FLYING SAILOR worked his way up on the outside, finished gamely. CROWNING GLORY was hustled up inside into the lead, then stopped badly. PRE WAR dropped back and never was a contender. SASSAFRAS lacked speed and ran away below his recent race. BRANDON MINT had plenty of speed for five furlongs, then tired.

Stocks Driven Lower Under Selling Rush

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—The outstanding development of the financial day—President Roosevelt's proclamation devaluing the dollar to 59.06 per cent of its old parity—came an hour after markets here had closed with stocks lower under profit-taking.

Wall street had been prepared for a reduction to 60 per cent, so that the actual figure was somewhat in the nature of a surprise. The first available reaction locally was in foreign exchanges which scrambled hastily to readjust themselves to what appeared to be a new situation; on the Pacific Coast stocks turned strong.

With the Treasury ready to sell gold again on an exchange basis, it was quickly inferred that the United States had adopted a gold bullion standard for international purposes and that the dollar was back on a more workable keel.

Sterling Cancels Losses.

Sterling, which had been 3 cents lower, more than canceled its loss in a few minutes and considerable confusion was apparent throughout the exchange market.

Financial circles pointed out that the President's action had halted the dollar's marked tendency to rise. What its eventual ratio to sterling will be is a matter for future determination, although there have been indications that Washington favored something around $5.10.

Wall street hopes that the lifting of monetary uncertainties through formal determination of the dollar's value will help business, and it is largely in anticipation of such an effect that the security markets have built their advance of the past month. Greater stability in exchange rates, it is believed, should aid the growth of trade.

Stocks Grow Weary.

Stocks were obviously a bit tired after their recent vigorously conducted excursions upward, and the net decline for the averages, 1.3 point, was the largest since late December. A number of leaders yielded a point or so and a few dropped more extensively.

Exceptions to the rule were noted chiefly in specialty sections, particularly aircrafts and alcohols. Volume totaled 3,130,847 shares, about one million under Tuesday's figure.

With the industrial group shying away from a decisive penetration of the July highs, traders appeared cautious and profits were accepted with some willingness in the last hour. Earlier, the market had been irregular, though most of the old-line favorites drifted lower throughout the day. Activity among aviation stocks was pronounced, Douglas having an extreme rise of around 4, Sperry, North American Aviation, Bendix, Wright Aero, Curtiss-Wright, Aviation Corporation and United Aircraft also received attention.

Distilleries Move Briskly.

National Distillers Products moved briskly when its earnings were reported. Reflecting the sharp pickup in business incident to repeal, the company earned $2.21 a share in the last quarter of 1933. Rails, steels, motors and miscellaneous industrials seemed somewhat weary, though utilities were fairly steady.

Santa Fe was heavy throughout and Union Pacific canceled an early rise. United States Steel preferred slumped 3; perhaps some holders found the company's fourth quarter results rather disappointing. As for the 50-cent dividend, it had hardly been expected that more would be ordered.

The weekly Iron Age review said steel operations had risen to 35 per cent from the publication's average of 32 last week. It saw evidence that the automobile industry was endeavoring to regain preferential prices for large purchases, but reported that the industry had placed large material orders. Electric power output last week was down from the preceding period, though the comparison with 1933 was very favorable. Freight loadings seem to be holding well.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Secretary Morgenthau's Light-Hearted Attitude on Problems Involved in Handling Stabilization Fund Are Ill Fitted to the Needs of the Case.

By Ralph West Robey.

With the start of the stabilization fund it perhaps is worth while to review again the task that confronts Secretary Morgenthau in using these "blue chips," as he apparently prefers to call the fund, in holding the dollar at approximately 60 cents. It is a job the equal of which has never been undertaken by another government.

Other stabilization funds have been used to support a currency or to prevent temporary fluctuations, but never have they been used to drive a currency to an artificially low level and hold it there more or less permanently against world-wide economic and financial forces. Further, other stabilization funds always have had the advantage of being able to work through gold currencies, with the result that there was no particulatr problem involved in getting the funds back home. Mr. Morgenthau, for the most part, will have to trade in currencies that are not convertible into gold.

To appreciate the significance of this necessity to trade in inconvertible currencies it is necessary to bear in mind that the American dollar is at its present level primarily, if not entirely, as a result of artificial conditions. With a favorable balance of trade and a long-term capital position that also is in our favor, the dollar should be much higher, perhaps at the old par, in the foreign exchange markets. It is at its present level because of a series of official statements and actions that long ago removed all doubt as to the determination of the Administration to reduce the gold content of the currency.

Have Caused Large Outflow of Capital.

In other words, because of these declarations and policies a wholly abnormal demand has been created for foreign currencies. This demand has come both from our own citizens, who became frightened about the safety of their funds if held in this country, and from foreigners who had been holding investments in our markets. Such a demand, of course, drove the price of foreign currencies to high levels, and the dollar down by a corresponding amount. The lowest point for the dollar was in the middle of November, at a little above 58 cents. At the same time francs reached 6.70 cents and pounds sterling $5.50.

Now the task of stabilization would be comparatively simple if all this capital movement simply could be ignored. Then we could say that since the dollar currently is selling at about 60 cents this may be accepted as its real worth in world markets, and consequently holding it at this price will not result in any strains upon either our own or foreign economies.

In actual practice, however, the situation is very different from this. Much of this capital is anxious to come back to this country, and will came back when its owners believe that we finally have settled down on a policy that will be lasting or a policy that will lead to much higher speculative prices before the stabilization fund is exhausted. In consequence, whereas heretofore the pressure has been against the dollar, from now on, at least for a time, the pressure all will be on the other side. In other words, as a result of a return flow of capital the dollar will be in tremendous demand and will tend to rise.

Secretary Must Constantly Offer Dollars for Sale.

To prevent this rise taking place, Mr. Morgenthau will be faced with the necessity of constantly offering dollars for sale in the foreign exchange market. Every time some one wants to move a dollar back here, the stabilization fund will have to provide it. Otherwise our currency will become worth more than its declared value of 60 cents. What it all amounts to, then, is that Mr. Morgenthau, through his "blue chips," must absorb the capital that has flown from this country in recent months and now is trying to come back. If the amount of such capital is $2,000,000,000, there theoretically will be an exchange of the stabilization fund for private capital now held abroad and the Government will end up with the equivalent of some $2,000,000,000 in foreign currencies, most of which will be irredeemable in gold.

Then, of course, will come the task of the Government getting this money back home. If another flight of capital starts out of this country as a result of our economy starting to run wild, this can be accomplished by a reverse exchange—the Government merely selling its holdings to those wanting to move their capital abroad. On the other hand, if no such renewed flight takes place, the $2,000,000,000 will be locked abroad, for any attempt to get it back through the ordinary purchasing of dollars in the market would drive our currency above its declared value and we would undo our attempts to hold it at 60 cents.

How much simpler it would be merely for the Government to declare a definitive stabilization of the dollar at 60 cents. Then nothing in the world, granting we followed reasonable financial policies in other directions, could break our currency system.

Bond Market Touches High In Mixed Sales

Federal Issues Hold Firm; Total Trading Drops to $19,435,000.

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—With the exception of United States Government securities, which rallied substantially, the bond market closed moderately irregular today as some earlier gains were canceled under profit-taking.

The President's proclamation devaluating the dollar to 59.06 per cent of former parity and fixing the gold price, beginning tomorrow, at a flat $35 an ounce, came after the business in listed loans had ended for the day.

The action was in line with expectations, although, in some quarters, it had been believed that an inaugural 60 per cent rate would be decreed for the currency.

Federal Bonds Firm.

Federal bonds were firm from the start. The turnover here amounted to about $2,300,000, which, while about $1,000,000 ahead of yesterday, was not exceptionally large. Gains ranged from 2-32 to 23-32 of a point, with most attention being given to Treasury issues.

Excluding the Treasury 3s, 3¼s and 3¼s, all listed Government loans finished above par.

While the rails were the most active of the corporation groups, they tended to ease under realizing. The industrials performed best, the average for this division reaching another new high for the past year or more. The utilities moved up slightly to a new 1934 peak.

On Gaining List.

Among the more active industrial gainers of fractions to around 3 points were loans of American Cyanamid, American Rolling Mill, Armour & Co., Certain-Teed, Childs Co., International Mercantile Marine, Loew's, Otis Steel, Shell Union Oil, Universal Pipe and Wickwire Steel.

Recoveries of 1 to 3 or more points were recorded by obligations of Argentina, Colombia, Buenos Aires, Brazil, Germany, Greece, New South Wales, Poland and Finland. Bonds of Cuba reacted 1 to 4 and those of the United Kingdom, France and Dutch East Indies declined a point or more.

The average for 60 domestic corporate issues was up one-tenth of a point to a new high for this year at 82. The 1933 top for this average was 83.5. Sales totaled $19,435,000, par value, against $21,055,000 yesterday.

Foreign Markets.

London, Jan. 31 (A.P.).—The stock exchange maintained its cheerful tone throughout most of today's session. Gilt-edged securities, distillery stock, oil shares and transatlantic issues advanced, the latter on the favorable Wall street advices. Profit-taking later caused some recessions and the market closed quieter.

Paris—With traders worried over the shaky position of the new cabinet, prices on the bourse lost ground in spite of the better tone in Wall street. Rentes declined slightly and the market closed heavy.

Berlin—The favorable reception accorded Chancellor Hitler's spech abroad and British disarmament prospects stimulated prices on the boerse. The advance was general with potash shares leading. The market closed a shade below the best.

Curb's Prices React Under Profit-Taking

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—The curb market reacted under moderate profit-taking today. Resistance was offered to selling; but despite some late improvement, losses of fractions to point or more predominated at the close. A few scattered shares worked against the trend, primarily specialties, including aircraft shares.

Utilities held fairly well. Electric Bond & Share and American Gas & Electric averaged ½ point lower, but Columbia Gas & Electric preferred gained nearly 2, in a light turnover. Waco and Bellanca Aircraft finished a little higher and Pan-American Airways virtually canceled a 2-point dip. Childs preferred soared 8 points in quiet dealings and J. J. Newberry rose 3¼. Sherwin Williams edged up fractionally.

Recessions of sizable fractions to a point or so occurred in Hiram Walker, Canadian Industrial Alcohol "A," Newmont, Bunker Hill & Sullivan, Gulf and Humble Oils, Standard Oils of Indiana and Ohio, A. O. Smith and Parker Rust Proof.

Wheat Rallies Trim Losses In Early Sales

Chicago, Jan. 31 (AP).—Almost 2 cents a bushel break in wheat values today followed four days of continuous advance, but late rallies partly overcame the losses.

Various observers said the wheat market had become at least temporarily overbought and that something of a reaction was to have been expected. It was pointed out as significant that on a gold basis the international wheat price is yet 17 cents below the figure at which lower tariffs were to become effective in leading countries.

Wheat closed unsettled, ⅝ to 1¼ under yesterday's finish; corn, ¼ to ½ down; oats, ½ to ⅝ off, and provisions showing 2 cents to 5 cents decline.

Contributing to Loss.

Contributing to the downward trend of the wheat market was the fact that many recent purchasers were trying to run their holdings into cash, and thus make profits secure.

In addtion, new buying power appeared to have dwindled because of belief that for the present the peak of the advance had been passed. Weakness of sterling, together with an easier tone in the stock market, counted as a further bearish influence, and so too did talk that growing weather would be needed to determine what crop damage of importance had been done to soft winter wheat during the cold wave.

Dust storms, which were reported today over parts of the Southwest, were more or less effective as a late-rallying incentive for wheat prices.

Storms and Crops.

The storms tended to increase apprehension regarding the crop outlook for hard wheat in drought districts, especially as the Washington official summary today noted that deterioration of wheat on the Western Great Plains had continued, with the grain beyond recovery in places.

With the official summary also stating that damage to soft wheat East was probable, late purchasers doubted that market setbacks would extend, and asserted that buying on declines was in order.

Corn and oats sympathized with wheat price downtrends. Cable reports said rains now would do little good to corn in Argentina, as irreparable damage had been done by abnormal heat and drought.

Provisions were responsive to setbacks of hog values.

Rubber Goods Export Trade Is Improved

United States export trade in rubber manufactures registered a 9 per cent increase in value in 1933 over the preceding year, according to figures compiled in the Commerce Department's Leather-Rubber Shoe Division. Total shipments in the two periods were valued, respectively, at $17,826,362 and $16,364,678.

A noteworthy feature of this increased trade in 1933, it is pointed out, is the fact that during each of the first six months of the year the exports were lower than for the corresponding month of 1932. The upward trend began in July and continued each month thereafter.

Tires, inner tubes, and tire sundries, the most important classification of rubber manufactures entering export trade, rose from a value of $9,300,787 in 1932 to $10,440,300 in 1933, an increase of 12 per cent; mechanical rubber goods advanced from $1,797,842 to $2,137,498, an increase of 19 per cent, while rubberized fabrics were valued at $420,866, compared with $523,203, an increase of 24 per cent.

Rubber footwear and semimanufactured goods were the only two items of rubber exports which declined in 1933 compared with 1932. The former dropped 26 per cent, from $784,369 to $580,111, and the latter, 1 per cent, from $1,826,243 to $1,817,309.

Ticker Club Governors Nominate 1934 Officers

At a recent meeting of the board of governors of the Ticker Club a nominating committee was appointed to nominate officers and board of governors, whose names will be presented for ballot at the annual meeting to be held in March. The committee is composed of Charles Carroll Morgan, chairman; George A. Garrett, Chester W. Lockwood, A. H. Reeside and F. J. F. Thiel.

Goods Markets.

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—The month closes with cotton goods very firm. Sales of unfinished broadcloths, combed and carded, have been large. Some prices are ¼ cent a yard higher. New prices on blankets showed a rise of 50 per cent over the lows of last year and there are some instances of larger advances. Worsted dress goods are more active. Rayon yarn sales in actetate lines and for knitting purposes are taking care of nearby production. Silk goods remain steady and in fair demand. Burlaps are firm.

Savings and Loan Elects '34 Officers

Takoma Park, Md., Jan. 31. The Northwestern Savings and Loan Association held its annual meeting of shareholders yesterday. A large number of interested shareholders were in attendance and a lively interest was shown in the statement of the year's business.

The following directors were elected for the year 1934: Alfred B. Baker, Dr. John W. Chappell, Dr. G. F. Coulon, E. V. Crittenden, W. S Dewhirst, Howard S. Gott. R. L. Houston Jones, Arthur C. Keefer, Frederick Lewton, Jesse H. Powell, Dr. W. W. Stockberger, W. R. Tuckerman.

The treasurer's statement showed assets of nearly $2,000,000, an increase of $107,000 over the previous year. It also showed the association to be in a healthy and thriving condition with dividends at the rate of 7 per cent per annum paid consecutively for the past 26 years and with a steadily growing surplus. The treasurer, Mr. Gott, reported that income from sales of shares and current dues were almost on a par with the previous year while withdrawals by shareholders were 40 per cent less than in 1932. The treasurer also laid much stress upon the fact that many of the association's borrowers had been assisted over rough places during the year and many homes had been saved from foreclosure through adjustment of loans and reductions in monthly payments.

E. V. Crittenden, president; W. S. Dewhirst, vice president; H. S. Gott, secretary and treasurer; A. B. Baker, attorney.

Italy to Raise Import Duties on Some Goods

Effective January 29, 1934, the Italian government has sharply increased the "general" import duties on leather footwear, livestock, and on fresh and frozen meats, according to a cablegram received in the Department of Commerce from Commercial Attache Charles A. Livengood, Rome.

These increased "general" rates do not apply on imports of frozen meats and boys' and children's shoes coming from most-favored-nation countries, including the United States, so long as lower conventional duties established by tariff treaties with certain countries continue operative, and they are understood to be still in effect on these products. The new "general" rates, including the additional duty of 15 per cent ad valorem, on the other products listed, are applicable on imports from all countries.

Import Duties Approved.

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Jan. 31 (AP).—New import duties were approved yesterday by Congress. Among products affected are cheese, on which an impost of 21½ American cents are placed; salted meat, 30 cents; leather goods, 10 cents; lard, 17½ cents, and grease, 10 cents.

Trade Climbs In Fifth Area; Failures Drop

Business in Several Lines Exceeds Previous Year; Tobacco Soars.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 31 (AP).—Better prices for farm products lifted the fifth Federal Reserve district out of its business stagnation in 1933 and gave commerce and industry renewed hopes as 1934 began, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported today in its monthly summary of business, credit and agricultural conditions.

For the first time since 1929, several lines of business last year showed improvement over those of the preceding year. Agriculture and textiles, however, reflected the sharpest upturns. These factors included:

The cotton crop was increased 4 per cent and was worth 66 per cent more.

Tobacco Production Up.

Tobacco production rose 72 per cent, and the value of the tobacco grown rose 122 per cent.

The wheat yield was 18 per cent higher than in 1933, and the value 85 per cent above 1932 value. Corn production increased 23 per cent, and the farm value of the crop was 80 per cent higher. These two factors of larger yields and higher prices served to lift agriculture from its doldrums and inspire business generally, the report said.

Cotton consumption in the fifth district rose by 21 per cent in 1933 compared with 1932, textile mills having been especially active during the summer months.

Wholesalers Prosper.

Wholesale trade in five lines showed an increase in total sales amounting to 14 per cent over the preceding year, four of the five lines reporting increases.

Coal production exceeded 1932 figures by 6 per cent, increased industrial activity in many lines requiring larger supplies of fuel.

The bankruptcy record, both in number of failures and liabilities involved, showed marked improvement over 1932.

While department store sales failed by 4.6 per cent to equal 1932 sales, the purchases made by consumers in the last half of 1933 exceeded sales in the corresponding period of 1932 by nearly 5 per cent, December buying in retail stores being especially encouraging.

Wall Street Briefs.

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—Dow, Jones & Co. estimates that net profit of Humble Oil & Refining Co. for 1933 was in the neighborhood of $7 a share on the old capital stock which is being split three for one. Such results would be the best since 1929. Standard Oil of New Jersey has an interest of more than 70 per cent in Humble.

Arthur E. Allen has been made vice president of Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. and will have charge of the merchandising division.

By exchanging gold to which it had title in London or Paris for metal held here under foreign earmark, the Government has repatriated a further $5,166,800 of gold bought abroad, it was disclosed today. Including this transaction the Treasury and Federal Reserve bank have now made arrangements to recall, in all, $17,665,500 of the gold bought abroad in connection with the dollar depreciation operations. This amount is estimated in some banking quarters at a little more than 10 per cent of the total foreign purchases made so far.

Stocks of lead in the United States on January 1 totaled 295,704 short tons, against 284,625 on December 1 and 263,296 on January 1, 1933, the American Bureau of Metal Statistics reports. World production in December was 134,328 tons, compared with 132,830 in November and 105,214 in December, 1932.

Universal Pipe & Radiator Co. announced that interests on its 6 per cent debenture bonds of 1936, which was due December 1, was being paid today.

Navy Relief Society Meets.

The annual meeting of the Navy Relief Society will be held today at 10:30 a. m. in room 1047, Navy Department. Admiral William H. Standley, Chief of Operations, will make his annual report.

U. S. Naval Stores Gain in Germany

Imports of American naval stores into Germany registered marked improvement in 1933, as compared with the preceding year, according to advices from Consul Sydney B. Redecker, Frankfort-on-Main, made public by the Commerce Department.

Receipts of American turpentine increased from an average of 311,079 gallons per month in the first half of the year to an average of around 488,029 gallons in the four months from July to October, 1933. Imports of American gum rosin increased from an average of 3,561 to an average of 4,600 metric tons for the two periods.

As a result of the heavy gains in the second half of 1933, total German receipts of American turpentine advanced to 12,146 tons in the ten months ended October, 1933, from 8,997 tons in the corresponding period of 1932. During the ten-month period American gum rosin advanced to a total of 39,803, compared with 32,322 tons for the ten months of 1932.

Radio Waves and Ripples

THAT Arthur Godfrey has left WJSV and its Sun Dial flat on their backs and has departed for New York and a brand-new job is being rumored in these parts with a persistency not warranted by the facts.

The red-haired announcer did make a quick trip to the metropolis yesterday for the purpose of interviewing several people about prospects for landing in big time, and it is quite likely that one of these days will find him on Broadway. But the early morning broadcast specialist is smart enough to take a good, long look before leaping. Specialists have a way of working themselves out of a job if they're not careful.

Godfrey got one of the best publicity breaks of his career last week when WJSV kept him on the air all night. He was heard throughout the country, followed by two very kind notices in a widely read Broadway column.

UNTIL the script called for fire spitting by a dragon, Bradley Barker had been able to produce all the sound effects for the Wizard of Oz programs on N. B. C. with his mouth.

Chickens cackled or crowed, lions and tigers roared, bats swooped and flapped, field mice ran or merely scampered, all by virtue of the ingenious Barker mouth. But it failed to produce a noise satisfactorily emulating a dragon spitting fire.

To Barker's everlasting credit it must be said that he tried every vocal gymnastic known to animal imitators before giving up and resorting to an air tank for hissing sounds and the crunching of cellophane for the crackling of fire.

• • • •

One shouldn't take too literally all one hears on the radio.

For instance, the Seth Parker was still at her O street moorings yesterday, though at the close of the Phillips Lord broadcast Tuesday night one distinctly got the impression she was leaving. That was merely for effect. Lord has to have some way of closing a program, and, so far, no one has been able to figure out anything better than to make embarkation noises.

As a matter of fact, the Seth Parker probably would steam away after each Tuesday night broadcast if only to keep people from talking about faking, &c., but most of the time tide or wind is unfavorable.

N. B. C. really believes Lord will eventually get around the world. One of these days, it figures, he will run out of ports of call in this country and head straight for the African coast.

N. B. C. and C. B. S. will mobilize nearly a million boys around loudspeakers in halls and auditoriums in every section of the country for the President's message to the Boy Scouts February 10.

Columbia will feed the broadcast to 7,500 of them gathered in New York's Hippodrome and WJSV will send the Roosevelt call to 3,000 more in Washington Auditorium. N. B. C. is collecting scouts in similar numbers in other large metropolitan areas.

While the nature of the service for which the President will issue the special call is being kept a secret until the broadcast, it is understood that Mr. Roosevelt will ask the scouts to direct their energies into a great National project. Federal Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins has been in consultation with the President and Walter Head, president of the Boy Scouts, but details of their plan will not be revealed until the call to service is issued at noon.

The date will mark the twenty-fourth anniversary of the founding of the scout organization in this country. Mr. Roosevelt has invited a group of Eagle Scouts to be present at the White House during the broadcast. Mr. Head and Dr. James E. West, chief scout executive, also will be with the President and will be heard during the program. Music will be supplied by the Marine Band.

New program building continues merrily at WOL. On the air this week are the "Gypsy Barytone," long a Paramount and Loew stage feature; "Ike at the Mike," Ike Tillcy in an emulation of Cliff Edwards; "Ranico Hawk," Indian tales for children, and "Court Highlights," a behind-the-courtroom news broadcast, by Jack Housman, newspaper scribe.

WMAL rounds out a year as an N. B. C. station today. Few people, apparently, know this, for, so far, no mention has been made of any sort of an observance like lighting a candle on a cake or putting on a special broadcast of some sort, which we know is not like radio.

The station was put on the air as an independent by the late Martin A. Leese in January of 1926. It operated for a time as a Columbia outlet before N. B. C. made it the eighty-ninth on its coast-to-coast chain.

The Northeast Boys' Band and their president, Bruce Baird, will broadcast from WRC tonight with the Radio Joe program.

George Gershwin has been signed for a series of informal concerts on N. B. C., his first regular sponsored program, beginning Monday, February 19.

Accompanied by an orchestra, conducted by Louis Katzman, Gershwin will play compositions written by himself and other modern composers, then proceed to a narration of the history behind each number.

Bid for Arms Accord Seen In British Note

Common Ground Reported for Franco-German Compromise.

London, Jan. 31 (AP).—The belief that Great Britain has again assumed the role of mediator and advanced a new disarmament plan in a memorandum sent to interested powers were expressed in circles close to the British government.

Official quarters remained close-mouthed regarding the contents of the note, but well-informed circles pictured it as offering a compromise which France and Germany may be able to accept, thus providing a common ground for bridging their divergent viewpoints.

While it was pointed out that Franco-German direct conversations have reached a stalemate, if not an actual breakdown, it was believed that both countries continued to want to settle their differences.

An authoritative spokesman pointed out, in connection with the memorandum, that while a persusal of Great Britain's stand at Geneva last March might lead to partly correct generalizations, changing conditions since then would lead to "as many or more misses than hits."

Meanwhile, the government found opposition to its lack of definite action earlier regarding disarmament.

The Evening News editorially criticized the national administration for "its milksop internationalists," and added:

"It should purge itself of its lackey-souled peace mongers whose idea in maintaining British prestige is to go tittuping around Europe's capitals, hat in hand, and peddling unwanted disarmament with the glib tenacity of a drummer peddling soap."

Paris Cabinet Runs Headlong Into Trouble

Herriot Faction Cool, Tardieu Opposed to New Set-up.

Hatreds which the new Premier tried to avoid flared immediately. Col. Jean Fabry, Marshal Joffre's aide-de-camp during the war and the new war minister, was ejected from the Tardieu party for joining the cabinet.

The Tardieu group decided not to support it because "it contains nine members of Camille Chautemp's cabinet, condemned by events to resign without a debate," and "because it does not answer the needs for vigorous action."

The Daladier ministry, a cabinet neither radical nor conservative and composed mainly of veteran statesmen, was completed to succeed that of Chautemps, which fell because of popular indignation over the Stavisky Pawnshop scandal, in connection with which it was charged with corruption.

Quick action to throw "full light" on the Stavisky affair was decided upon at the first cabinet meeting in order to carry to the chamber some definite achievement before a vote of confidence is asked.

Real "Old Stuff" Buried In Missouri River Silt

Elk Point, S. Dak. (U.P.).—An adventuresome person to finance a search for "treasure-trove" aboard a sunken river steamer was being sought today by E. E. Werner, a resident here for 40 years.

The "treasure," 100 barrrels of whisky, went down with the side-wheeler Leadora May 21, 1866, according to Werner, who claims documentary proof and the word of reliable men.

The Missouri River, Werner said, has changed its course since the disaster, and the boat now lies buried beneath 25 feet of silt three-quarters of a mile from the present river bank. All Werner asks is $2,000 to finance the excavation on a 50-50 basis.

Schools Balk, Paintings Await Another "Spot"

Post Staff Photos.

The roseate spoonbills (above) and the toucans (shown below) with Miss Julia Eckel, who painted both canvases, were to have been exhibited in schoolrooms for educational purposes, but the schools so far have not joined in the Public Works of Art program. Zoo specimens modeled for these paintings. Miss Eckel, who lives at 1503 Decatur street northwest, is one of the 60 artists given employmen in the District at salaries ranging from $26.50 to $42.50 per week, less the 10 per cent cut. She studied one year at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts on a scholarship, holds a degree in fine arts from George Washington University and spent two years as a student at the Corcoran School.

Miss Perkins Outlines Labor Hope to Miners

Short Hours, Better Wages Salvation of U. S., She Declares.

Indianapolis, Jan. 31 (AP). — In shorter working hours and better wages lies the salvation of all the people of America, declared Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, in addressing the convention of the United Mine Workers of America here.

The Cabinet member explained that the income of the farmers and the wages of industrial workers represents the bulk of the Nation's buying power. During the depression, she said, this buying power was reduced approximately $12,000,0000,000, and this can only be recovered through better wages and shorter working hours, so the wages will be spread among a greater number.

Conditions appear to be improving, she said, under the NRA and other recovery measures. The codes, however, do not represent the final objective in wages and hours, the Labor Secretary asserted. They are only a "rough approximation."

"Every man and woman in this country who is willing to work needs to be permanently and securely employed," Miss Perkins said, adding that leisure to devote to the cultural things also was needed.

Machines used in the mines and the factories should be made servants of the workers, the speaker continued. She also asserted there was no reason why "we should go on ruthlessly wasting men and women in industrial accidents and diseases."

Hubbard Medal To Be Awarded Mrs. Lindbergh

Is First Woman to Get National Geographic Society Honor.

That select circle, the holders of the Hubbard Gold Medal of the National Geographic Society, has been invaded by a woman. Award of the medal to Mrs. Anne Morrow Lindbergh has been announced.

Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the society, announced the award, voted by the society's trustees. He said the presentation would be made here later.

Although several women have flown across the North Atlantic, Mrs. Lindbergh is the first to cross the South Atlantic by plane. Also she is the only woman to have crossed from America to Japan by air.

The two Lindberghs and Admiral Byrd are the only recipients for aviation achievement. In 1932 Amelia Earhart was awarded the society's special gold medal for her Atlantic flight.

'Florida Police Like Thugs,' So Amy Mollison Drove Away

British Aviatrix Says Men in Mufti, Were Harsh and Discourteous.

Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 31 (AP).—Mrs. Amy Johnson Mollison, British aviatrix, has changed her mind about commenting on her arrest for reckless driving at Fort Lauderdale Monday, and said that she had fled from arresting officers because she feared they were gangsters.

They were in civilian clothes, she said, adding that such a thing couldn't happen in England. "Police don't act like gangsters," there.

Two men stopped her, she said, and because they were too "harsh and discourteous" to be police—she based her judgment on her knowledge of police in England—she drove off.

They pursued and caught her. She hit one of them and tried to escape on foot, she said, but was taken to jail and held there. In court she was not allowed to testify for herself, said Mrs. Mollison.

The aviatrix was fined $50 and costs. She admitted she might have been driving too fast, but said it was on an open road with no cars or buildings in sight and that she was "certainly endangering no one."

Gets Medal for Accident.

Milwaukee, Jan. 31 (AP).—Charles Follmer, Milwaukee, who drove his car into a ditch, injured himself and three passengers in an effort to avoid striking a dog, is going to get a medal from the Wisconsin Humane Society for meritorious service in behalf of animals. Follmer's car turned over twice.

'Kingfish' Flays His 'Defamers', Asking Probe

(Associated Press.)

Unloading his wrath on all his opponents, at the head of whom he placed J. P. Morgan, Senator Huey Long told the Senate the politics practiced in Louisiana was no different from that of other States and even of National committees and asked a Senate investigation of efforts to "defame" and "libel" him.

At the conclusion of his two and a half hour speech, punctuated by jokes and laughter from the galleries, Chairman Connally of the Overton Investigating Committee, and Senator Robinson said the committee had performed its duty despite many hindrances.

Long had mentioned stories of Connally climbing a "fire escape" to get into the hearing room. Connally said it was not a fire escape at all up which he and others climbed to avoid "mobs" in front of the building; that it was a "broad iron stairway" and the window through which he climbed opened into the hearing room.

Long said the investigating committee had found Overton, whom he backed for the Senate, "as clean as the angel's ghost."

"We're in the clear in this matter," he shouted, adding his faction had done everything it could to prevent the use of dummy candidates.

He contended there was not one line of evidence that anyone in his State was ever "coerced into making a contribution."

In a resolution, Long asked that a special committee of five Senators be named to investigate who and how much money had been spent in sending information about him through the mails, over the radio and in the newspapers.

Woodside Girl Hurt Fighting Fire in Home

Bessie Bergman, 17, daughter of Mr and Mrs. F. A. Bergman, of Woodside, Md., received a badly cut arm while attempting to extinguish a fire on the roof of her home at 8708 Rairview avenue. Silver Spring firemen rendered first aid and took her to the office of a physician.

Miss Bergman was injured when she broke a window pane in an upstairs room to pour water on the fire. It started with soot and oil sprayed from the chimney when an oil burner exploded, and was confined to the roof.

Treasury Head Reorganizes Legal Set-Up

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Morgenthau has moved to tighten his supervision of Federal tax collections and strengthen the entire revenue machinery.

In the first step, E. Barrett Prettyman was out as general counsel of the Internal Revenue Bureau. Robert Jackson, of Jamestown, N. Y., was understood to be Morgenthau's selection for the place.

Prettyman's resignation was known to have been "suggested" by Morgenthau, not because of any personal friction or disagreement, but simply because the Treasury head preferred an official of his own selection.

Creation of a general Treasury counsel with a number of assistants to specialize on income tax law evasion was proposed to House Ways and Means Committee Democrats by Roswell Magill, Morgenthau's tax adviser.

Such action would make permanent a set-up Morgenthau already has created. Herman Oliphant is acting as the Treasury's general counsel, but is being paid out of emergency funds.

ONE WOMAN

of Dr. Locke Shoes

We've been the exclusive Washington agents for Dr. M. W. Locke Shoes for the past eleven months. We've set our checker-uppers to work, watching customer purchases, and straight away they found that one woman bought eleven pairs of these famous orthopedic shoes. Digging further they found that this customer, after buying her first pair, immediately threw out her entire wardrobe of shoes, and replaced them with Dr. Locke's.

Such a tribute to these shoes speaks more for them than any advertisement. Why don't you, too, try these shoes? In our opinion, they're the finest orthopedic shoes in America. And they have been personally designed and approvd by Dr. M. W. Locke of Williamsburg, Ontario, Canada, who has treated hundreds of foot-sufferers in his famous front-yard clinic.
